Liquor-by-drink ordinance okayed

NEW MADRID — The City Council passed an ordinance for liquor by the drink, appointed a new dog catcher, discussed citizens complaints and heard reports at its Monday night meeting.

The liquor-by-the-drink ordinance, presented for final passage, was approved at the Dec. 17 council meeting. It will allow one license for each 700 population, or a fraction thereof, instead of the previous ordinance which allowed one license for each 1,000 or fraction thereof.

James Kosky was appointed city dog catcher by Mayor Jim Cravens. The office had been vacant for several months.

Complaints were heard from citizens concerning dogs running loose and tearing up garbage bags. Garbage service and bad street conditions at the railraod crossing on Kingshighway were also discussed.

The council agreed that the appointment of a dog catcher would help to alleviate the dogs running loose and tearing up garbage bags. It was thought that since garbage pickup is now back to a regular basis since the holidays, the number of bags being torn up should also diminish.

A complaint was heard that the garbage contractor, New Madrid County Sanitation Inc., had increased garbage fees to commercial users without first negotiating the fee with the various businesses, as was called for in the contract.

In some cases, fees were doubled. Two businessmen reported that their rates had been increased by over 50 per cent, with the contractor having never made a pickup at one place and only one time at the other since the contract was approved over a year ago.

The council authorized a letter to the railroad company concerning the repair of the crossing and ordered that temporary repairs be made with gravel.

City Administrator Don Lloyd reported to the council that

Bridger gets contract for water plant

The City Council Monday night approved bids for the construction of a new water treatment plant and for the sale of the old airport tower and beacon, passed a resolution in support of federal revenue sharing, approved a rezoning and a subdivision plat and considered four requests for liquor license applications.

City Manager Charles Church issued a new year's prediction for the council. The city's 1976-77 fiscal year budget, now being prepared, will be balanced, he said. But the city will either have to raise taxes or cut services drastically to stay out of the red. The city may have to take out short term loans to meet cash flow problems during the year, he added.

WATER PLANT BIDS

The council approved bids for three phases of the water treatment plant to be built on North West street north of the steam plant. The plant is designed to double Sikeston's water capacity.

Bridger Plumbing and Heating was awarded the contract for the construction of the plant with a bid of $311,000. Other bidders were Boyer Construction of Sikeston, $357,400; Jackson Excavating Co. of Jackson, $402,962; Lucas and Son of Grand Rivers, Ky., $379,900; M.D. Limbaugh of Sikeston, $403,186.

The two feed wells will be drilled by Layne Arkansas Co. of Stutgart, Ark., for $90,000, the only bid received.

The filter equipment will be provided by Environmental Elements for $161,590, the only bid received.

The cost of the plant will be just under the $600,000 limit for bonds approved by the voters in 1974. Bids on the bonds will be opened Jan. 20.

The need for the treatment plant became apparent during 1974 when Sikeston's water treatment capacity was strained during a dry spell.

AIRPORT TOWER BIDS

The council accepted a bid of $401 for the sale and removal of the old airport tower and beacon. The approval is contingent on Cotton Holyfield showing liability insurance for the city's protection when he removes the tower.

The other bid received was from Ferrell Excavating Co. for $211.66.

REVENUE SHARING

The council passed a resolution indicating its support for federal revenue sharing. Renewal of the program has been bogged down in Congress.

The city received $155,000 for this fiscal year, which went for five new police cars, new fire equipment, the north side fire station and street and ditch projects.

Church said the funds are necessary to maintain a balanced budget.

REZONING AND SUBDIVISION

The council rezoned three lots on the south side of Greer Street east of South Main Street from B 2-family to commercial.

A petition signed by 15 people against the rezoning was presented to the council, but no one signing the petition bothered to show up at the meeting.

The council approved the Matthews East Acres Subdivision second addition between Glenn Drive and the drainage ditch on the south side of Ables Road. The second addition contains 12 lots.

LIQUOR LICENSE APPLICATIONS

Requests for five per cent beer consumption licenses from Louis Jimmers on 108 Luther St. and his wife Mary Lou on 106 Luther St. were tabled.

City ordinance requires that license holders be current in their taxes and the Jimmersons owe back taxes, Church said. The council said it would review the applications when the taxes are paid.

Public hearings were set for February for license applications from Sylvester Murphy, 3.2 per cent beer at 811 W. Malone Ave.; Eric Piel, for a liquor license transfer; and Richard Wrather for a liquor store on W. Malone Avenue.

Piel, a councilman, told the council that he checked with the city attorney before applying for the license to make sure there was no conflict of interest.

He said he will disqualify himself from voting on any other liquor license applications where his business interests might be in conflict with those of the person applying for the license.

A Charleston youth was killed and a Wyatt youth seriously injured in a single- vehicle accident early Sunday, and eight other persons received moderate to minor injuries in three traffic accidents Saturday, Monday and early today, the highway patrol announced today.

The death was the second on Southeast Missouri roads this year, compared to one during the same period in 1975.

Kevin Francis Rolwing, 19, of Wyatt, a passenger in DeField's car, received serious injuries and was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

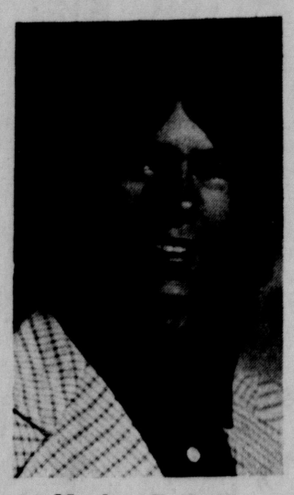

According to the patrol, DeField's car was southbound on I-55 at a high rate of speed when it ran off the road, hit two road signs and overturned several times, throwing both occupants from the vehicle.

The accident was discovered at 3 a.m. Sunday.

DeField was pronounced dead at the scene, according to the patrol.

He was born Aug. 28, 1956 in Cairo, Ill. and was a lifelong resident of Charleston, where he graduated from high school in 1975.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by one brother, Robert E. DeField, a University of Missouri student; one sister, Mrs. Lee Slaughter of Charleston; and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. H. T. Bryant of Charleston.

Federal officials probe Dexter business fire

DEXTER---Federal officials were in town this morning to investigate Thursday's fire which destroyed three businesses. Fire Chief Al Banken said the State Fire Marshal's office still has not determined the cause of the fire.

Arson is being considered as the possible cause of the fire, the worst in the city in five years.

The investigators are from The Bureau of Tobacco, Alcohol and Firearms.

Cause of the fire may be determined later today or Wednesday.

The Dexter fire department was called about 4:50 a.m. Thursday, but the fire apparently had started two hours before.

Thirty-five firemen from four area departments and six trucks fought the fire about two and a half hours Thursday before it was brought under control.

The fire apparently started in the back of Chrisman's Appliance Co., 107 E. Stoddard St. That business, Schneider's Family Shoe Store and the front of Medler's Cleaners were destroyed.

Kennett man dies in fire

The highway patrol said Minton apparently drove his car off the right side of the road into a ditch, laid down and went to sleep. The car caught fire and burned with Minton inside.

Dexter ponders shooting range

DEXTER---Police here may soon have a practice shooting range.

Mayor Willis Conner at a City Council meeting Monday night instructed the police committee to look into the possibility.

The old city dump north of town has been used as a practice range on an informal basis. No targets or other equipment has been provided by the city.

After Alderman Bill Nelson brought up the idea of the pistol range, Conners said, "I think it's a good idea".

Alderman Jack Smarr said sone confusion has surrounded a state program to provide street signs to the city, but the confusion has been cleared up.

The money is available, he said, and the work on placing the signs will start soon. Bids will be requested for the necessary signs, which will be based mainly on recommendations made in a study made previously by the State Highway Department.

Conner said the city had received earlier in the day a revenue sharing check for $25,375 and the federal program could be in danger.

"Revenue sharing has been a big help to the city", Conners said, "by the time we get through, we will have received a half million dollars".

Conners said he will attend a meeting Friday in Cape Girardeau where the matter will be discussed and he will report his findings to the council at it's next meeting.

He said a new fire truck was bought during the past year with revenue sharing funds.

The council voted to pay expenses involved in allowing Conner to attend a two-day legislative conference in Jefferson City and to pay $529 in dues as a member of Missouri Municipal League.

The investigators are from The Bureau of Tobacco, Alcohol and Firearms.

Cause of the fire may be determined later today or Wednesday.

The Dexter fire department was called about 4:50 a.m. Thursday, but the fire apparently had started two hours before.

Thirty-five firemen from four area departments and six trucks fought the fire about two and a half hours Thursday before it was brought under control.

The fire apparently started in the back of Chrisman's Appliance Co., 107 E. Stoddard St. That business, Schneider's Family Shoe Store and the front of Medler's Cleaners were destroyed.

Kennett man dies in fire

KENNETT — Eli Francis Minto, 62, of Kennett was burned to death in his car about 2:45 p.m. Monday on Township Road, six miles east of town.

The highway patrol said Minton apparently drove his car off the right side of the road into a ditch, laid down and went to sleep. The car caught fire and burned with Minton inside.

Dexter ponders shooting range

DEXTER---Police here may soon have a practice shooting range.

Mayor Willis Conner at a City Council meeting Monday night instructed the police committee to look into the possibility.

The old city dump north of town has been used as a practice range on an informal basis. No targets or other equipment has been provided by the city.

After Alderman Bill Nelson brought up the idea of the pistol range, Conners said, "I think it's a good idea".

Alderman Jack Smarr said sone confusion has surrounded a state program to provide street signs to the city, but the confusion has been cleared up.

The money is available, he said, and the work on placing the signs will start soon. Bids will be requested for the necessary signs, which will be based mainly on recommendations made in a study made previously by the State Highway Department.

Conner said the city had received earlier in the day a revenue sharing check for $25,375 and the federal program could be in danger.

"Revenue sharing has been a big help to the city", Conners said, "by the time we get through, we will have received a half million dollars".

Conners said he will attend a meeting Friday in Cape Girardeau where the matter will be discussed and he will report his findings to the council at it's next meeting.

He said a new fire truck was bought during the past year with revenue sharing funds.

The council voted to pay expenses involved in allowing Conner to attend a two-day legislative conference in Jefferson City and to pay $529 in dues as a member of Missouri Municipal League.

Pearson seeks sheriff's post

CHARLESTON — John Pearson, 52, of 206 Finney St., a veteran law enforcement officer, has announced his candidacy on the Democratic ticket for the office of sheriff of Mississippi County.

A resident of Mississippi County since September of 1936, Pearson has more than 15 years experience in the law enforcement field, having served for eight years on the Charleston Police Department and seven years as city marshal of Wyatt, a position he vacated last year to become a security guard for Ramada Inn in Miner.

Pearson lived in East Prairie until 1957 when he moved to Charleston, where he lived 11 years before moving to Wyatt. During this period he also served as a deputy sheriff.

Married and the father of three daughters, Mrs. Wanda Lee Williams, Mrs. Carla Mae Patrick of Charleston and Miss Yvonne Gale Pearson, a junior at Charleston High School. He and his wife also have two grandchildren. The family attends Temple Baptist Church of Sikeston.

John Pearson

Pearson completed a training course at Missouri State Highway Patrol Academy at Rolla and during his years of police work also completed numerous other law enforcement training courses through the University of Missouri- Columbia and Bootheel Law Enforcement Council.

Pearson said if he is elected, all duties of the office of sheriff will be performed in an honest and forthright manner with equal treatment for all Mississippi County residents. "I feel my years of experience have provided me the training and knowledge required for this office," Pearson stated.

Electronic equipment stolen

Money, electronic equipment and snacks were reported stolen in Sikeston, police said today.

Ruby Rhyne, 843 Lora St., told police that someone took $70 from the glove compartment of her car and sheets and pillow cases from her home between 10 a.m. Saturday and 7 p.m. Sunday.

A gum ball machine in the Sikeston Activity Center, 201 S. Kingshighway, was broken open and an undetermined amount of money was taken sometime Monday night. Themachine was owned by the Optimist Club.

An undetermined amount of snacks were taken from a vending machine between 4 a.m. and 5:43 a.m. Sunday at Houchin's Coin Laundry, on West Malone Avenue. Police said the value of the snacks was not known.

Burglars took an amplifier, and two large speakers valued at $1,200 from the First Assembly of God Church, 306 S. Kingshighway between 7:30 p.m. Dec. 29 and 11:30 a.m. Dec. 30, police said today.

Entry to the church was apparently gained by breaking out a window in the women's restroom on the northeast side of the building.

THROWING OUT THE BABY WITH THE BATH WATER

"Throwing out the baby with the bathwater" is a joke dating back to great- grandmother's day. Now the Congress seems determined to bring the joke back into circulation — except they're not joking.

We refer to the action by the House Subcommittee on the Postal Service, headed by Congressman James M. Hanley of New York, to forbid public use of coin-operated photocopy machines in Post Office lobbies across the country.

This is what happened. In 1974, the U.S. Postal Service initiated an over-the - counter sale of postal- related commercial products, such as self-inking stampers, automatic stamp dispensers, postal scales, and so forth. A business lobby representing retail stationery stores took strong action against the practice. Retreating before the pressure, the Hanley committee ordered the Post Office Service to discontinue the practice. It is important to note that at no time did the lobby express opposition against the photocopy machines. However, somewhere in the bureaucracy — and no one seems to know where — the order was issued by the Postal Service not only to discontinue the sale of postal- related products, but to kick out the non-offending photocopy machines as well.

Far from "competing with private enterprise," the photocopy machines are bought, paid for, and serviced by private enterprise. The business firms providing the machines pay sales andother taxes, and a royalty to the Postal Service. Since there is no cost to the government, the photocopy service provides pure profit to the government. Most important, the public is provided a convenient and popular service.

At this writing, however, the attitude of the Hanley committee appears to be, "to hell with the public." And clearly the attitude of bureaucracy is: "We made a mistake. But rather than admit it and correct it, we'll let it stand."

The television age has added hours to the time most Americans watch films and reduced the time many read. Part of the result can be seen in the failure of certain once- popular magazines in recent years.

Newspapers and books have not been adversely affected; book publishing has enjoyed good health in recent years and newspapers continue to grow. In fact, the addition of new newspapers supported by new shopping centers in metropolitan areas have forced mergers.

Yet reading remains, despite television, the greatest pleasure and source of information to many millions. It is a pastime one can enjoy when and where he or she wishes. The selection of reading material, also, is practically unlimited.

ANGOLA COUNTERACTION ESSENTIAL

The Soviet campaign to convert Angola into an African client state is not the first time Russia has interfered militarily in the affairs of black Africa. Fifteen years ago Moscow threw its weight behind Patrice Lumumba in the newly independent Belgian Congo (now Zaire) and Soviet cargo planes flew arms and supplies to his partisans.

That effort failed; Russia was too weak at the time to back up her hand. Also, the CIA was active behind the scenes. Today,the Soviet's Angola move is much more likely to succeed unless confronted by effective Western counteraction. The strategic stakes are also far greater. Angola has a long seacoast and if the Soviet- backed forces win the current civil war, then the U.S.S.R. stands to gain important air and naval bases astride the South Atlantic sea routes around the Cape of Good Hope. This will complete virtually the last link in the chain of Soviet global strategy at sea. With a system of bases almost world-wide, the already huge and still growing Soviet fleet will be able to operate in every ocean and make the U.S. naval mission of maintaining our overseas supply lines virtually impossible to fulfill.

As matters now stand, Russian ships are brazenly using the harbor of Luanda to unload considerable quantities of war material. Soviet advisers must necessarily be present to teach the black Angolans how to use the military equipment. Substantial numbers of Red Cubans are fighting on the side of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA). This Communist assistance has so far enabled the MPLA to stand off the attacks of its opponents and actually to advance in some areas. The Russian game seems to be to supply the MPLA with assistance long enough so that it is eventually recognized by the world as the "legitimate government" of Angola which can then enter into any sort of arrangement with the Soviets that it pleases. Without this Soviet assistance, many observers believe the MPLA would be quickly defeated.

What now remains to be seen is what leverage the U.S. will bring to bear on Moscow to cease its Angolan supply effort and how forcefully the Ford administration will use that leverage. The Soviets have gone as far as they have because they perceive a power vacuum in Angola and their sword has so far struck jelly rather than steel. This must change, and quickly. Henry Kissinger has issued a public warning that "the United States cannot remain indifferent" to Soviet and Cuban military intervention. This implies action on our part if the intervention continues. We await with interest the nature of that action.

MAYBE U.S. SHOULD PLAY HARD-TO-GET

Now that Gerald Ford has made the pilgrimage to Peking and been received by the living fossil of the Chinese Communist faith, Mao Tse-Tung, there should be no doubt in the minds of Americans that their President is a very important man.

But neither should there be any doubt about something else. And that is that this presidential visit, like the historic "reopening" of China by Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger three years ago, came about because, and only because, it serves the interests of the rulers of China to maintain friendly relations with the United States. Were it not for China's colossal fear of Russia, China today would be as self-isolated as it was in the days of Marco Polo, and the Chinese would be no more concerned about the distant world than their ancient emperors cared about affairs in the Rome of the Caesars. Even now, the ordinary Chinese, according to reporters accompanying the Ford entourage, express utter disinterest in learning what life is like for ordinary Americans.

Our diplomatic contacts with China since 1972 have been all one sided. No important Chinese official has visited this country. Our trade with China remains a drop in the bucket, even compared with our trade with far smaller nations.

China, at the present time, at least, has little that we need, and the Chinese seem determined to need as little as possible from us.

As for the rest of the world, however, the situation is entirely different. Rather than American presidents feeling compelled to show the flag—the presidential seal, that is—all over the world, if only to impress the folks back home, foreign leaders should be lining up to be received by us.

For the U.S. today is in a position of strength not approached by any other country.

There are only two other great powers in the world, and both of them actively court the friendship, or at least the neutrality, of the U.S. in their ideological struggle.

The Soviet Union is becoming more and more dependent upon American grain to feed its millions, as is much of the rest of the world. Compared to this dependency, the supposed stranglehold the oil sheiks have over the American economy has been vastly exaggerated.

The United States is no longer a youngster among nations. Our form of government is one of the oldest, and certainly one of the most resilient and adaptable. No domestic problem we face is beyond solution if we apply our wills and resources to it.

Yet we are guilty, apologetic and fearful for the fragility of our freedoms and way of life. Economists seriously wonder if our free enterprise system, the most successful the world has ever known, can long survive.

We seem still to be possessed of the old cold war fear that we are in a precarious state of siege, that we are surrounded by menacing forces which we must combat wherever they appear, even if it means adopting the methods of those who are anathema to everything we believe in.

We might well begin emulating the Chinese a little and let the world come to us—not out of any sense of smug superiority, but simply in the confident knowledge of the value of what we have to offer the world.

The U.S. is hardly the Heavenly Kingdom China once thought it was. But it is the center of the world in a way the emperors never dreamed of.

BETTING ON COMMON SENSE

While the cause of closing the breach in U.S. petroleum supplies appears to be lying dormant amidst controversy over who is to blame for the shortage, the truth is that work is going ahead in many areas, from Alaska's North Slope to preparations for moving greater quantities of imported petroleum.

With respect to the latter, a spokesman for the U.S. maritime industry reported late in 1973 that, since passage of the 1970 Merchant Marine Act, contracts for 50 new U.S.-flag vessels have been signed. Thirty-five of the 50 new ships are liquefied natural gas carriers and oil tankers, ranging in size from 35,000 to 265,000 DWT (deadweight tons)--the latter designated as Very Large Crude Carriers (VLCC). In addition, 92 tankers valued at $5.6 billion and varying from just under 40,000 to 400,000 DWT are in the planning stage. Super tankers offer both the economies of scale and greater safety when utilized in combination with "superports."

A U.S. Coast Guard analysis of world tanker casualties reveals that the accident probability for small tankers serving conventional ports is much greater than that for supertankers serving offshore deepwater ports. The offshore location of ths deepwater ports provides greater safety because they are removed from shallow waters and heavy ship traffic.

The U.S. Merchant Marine, like every segment of the energy industry, is planning for the future on the assumption of public support for the measures and technology that are the keys to meeting tomorrow's energy needs. They are betting on the common sense of the American people whose jobs and security are the high stakes involved in the energy crisis.

AGAIN, WE MUST HANG TOGETHER, OR...

"When in the course of human events the threat of extinction confronts mankind, it is necessary for the people of the United States to declare their interdependence with the peoples of all nations and to embrace those principles and build those institutions which will enable mankind to survive and civilization to flourish."

So reads the preamble to a "Declaration of Interdependence," a document written for today's world by noted historian Henry Steele Commager. The complete text will be read publicly for the first time in Philadelphia on October 24.

The new Declaration is one of five principal steps in a program developed by the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia to foster American actions to meet the challenges of global interdependence. Others include:

—A ceremonial singing of the Declaration by members of Congress and other Americans at Independence Hall in January, 1976.

—Arranging a series of "Interdependence Assemblies" and encouraging the study of interdependence in the nation's schools.

The World Affairs Council sees its role as that of a catalyst, to bring together distinguished leaders and experts to discuss and analyze the facts and issues shaping world affairs and American foreign policy.

Its program will actually run for 13 years, paralleling the span between 1776, when the Declaration of Independence was promulgated, and 1789, when the new system of federal government began to function under the U.S. Constitution.

Like that original Declaration, "it is recognized that this will be a beginning, not a conclusion of effort," says Frederick Heldring, chairman of the council's Bicentennial Era program.

Why a "Declaration of Interdependence"?

Because just as the founding fathers of the United States framed their Declaration on the basis of certain self-evident truths, new self-evident truths of an even more complex nature confront the United States and the whole world today.

The lives, fortunes and cultures of all peoples are threatened by worldwide imbalances of food, natural resources, intercontinental pollution, world population, crisis in the international monetary system and military armaments out of control, as well as a host of other threats to human development and order that transcend national boundaries, points out William W. Bodine Jr., president of the council.

"It is time," he says, "for daring initiatives by people concerned and responsible for the fate of mankind." It is the council's hope to reawaken the spirit that led to a mutuality of understanding among the American colonies and to kindle that same spirit for an understanding of mutuality among nations.

As the nation approaches its Bicentennial, says Bondine, "nothing could be more timely and relevant than to extend the concept of independence to interdependence."

CORPORATE RIPOFF: 'COLLAR' COMBINATION

One major area of crime in America not reflected in FBI statistics is so-called "white collar" crime.

Depending upon whose figures you care to cite, business is losing between $15 billion and $50 billion annually to crime, says Industry Week, with the vast majority of it resulting from internal, or employe, theft.

Ripping off the company is the common bond of both white and blue collar workers, says the magazine. If a company is missing $100,000, it's as likely that a vice president manipulated accounts payable records as it is that a warehouse clerk stole it by falsifying inventory records.

Employe crime ranges from the pilfering of pens, pencils and envelopes for home use to at least one instance where a corporate vice president and a shipping superintendent headed up a team of employes that stole by the truckload. Blue collar workers did the legwork and white collar workers handled the covering bookwork.

Although an estimated 87 per cent of employe crime is theft-related, a company may also be the victim of sabotage. This means not only literally throwing a wrench into a machine but such activities as disrupting schedules so that employes rack up more overtime.

Employe theft may be a significant cause of spiraling hospital costs, reports another publication, Modern Health care. It quotes New York security consultant Norman Jaspan to the effect that hospital costs could be reduced by as much as 15 per cent if employe thefts and other types of fraud were cut to a minimum.

These include such things as padded charges and kickbacks, falsification of labor vouchers, the use of hospital facilities, equipment and chemicals for outside sidelines, the diversion of funds from accounts receivable and the treating of patients at hospital expense by doctors who are paid personally.

If all this is bad news for business in general, it is good news for one business in particular. Increasing recognition of the severity of employe crime is boosting demand for security services, both guard and electronic.

One study shows spending for electronic security systems alone growing from $520 million in 1974 to $1.3 billion in 1984, with industry the major buyer.

OLD VIRTUES FAVORED

For the past 17 years, a major trading stamp company has conducted annual studies of public attitudes toward trading stamps. The findings of this company's latest survey are interesting for a number of reasons.

Perhaps most striking is the fact that more people like trading stamps than now have the chance to save them. While the number of households that save stamps declined to 64 per cent in 1973 from 70 percent the year before, the number of people who said they liked stamps rose to 71 percent in 1973 from 66 percent in 1972. Illustrating consumer loyalty, some 81 percent of shoppers who patronized stamp-giving supermarkets said they would be disappointed if those stores dropped stamps. This seems to indicate that when service stations and other businesses drop stamp-giving promotions, the millions of people who are subsequently deprived of the opportunity to save stamps feel they have lost something of value.

The vice president for economics of the trading stamp firm that conducted the survey attributes the evident loyalty of stamp savers to stamp-giving businesses to several factors: "The discount label many food chains adopted in the late sixties and early seventies appears to be losing some of its credibility. What seems to be happening is that people recognize that rising prices, especially when identified with supermarkets which have dropped trading stamps, just can't be attributed to the stamps. To a degree, people may be saying: 'They took away my stamps and gave me higher prices!'"

The survey may also show that consumers are rediscovering the old virtues of freedom of choice, promotion and advertising, competition, and the manner in which all of the forces of a free market work to fill the valleys and level the peaks of supply and demand. Perhaps consumers are even beginning to suspect the truth that many of the absurdities in today's marketplace are traceable to too much government interference.

'OH RON! POOR RON!"

WASHINGTON — Ron Nessen has been complaining about the clumsy image the media has been giving President Ford. Angered by the press coverage devoted to Mr. Ford's fall in the snow while skiing, Nessen told reportes it was "the most unconscionable misrepresentation of a President" he'd ever heard of.

He went on to say that President Ford was the "best co-ordinated President in history."

Now any press secretary worth his salt should know you don't get anywhere by complaining about the image the media is presenting of a President. What you do is turn an act of clumsiness into one of skill and dexterity.

I don't like to tell the White Houe press severtary how to run his business, but this would have been a much better way to handle the situation.

The afternoon briefing at Vail:

Q – Ron, we have a report that the President fell while skiing today. What do you have on that?

A – Yes, the President fell as planned this afternoon in six inches of snow near a large Aspen tree.

Q – As planned, Ron?

A – That's correct. Before he left Washington, the President made plans to fall just once so all the photographers would get the only picture they had made the trip for.

Q – You mean the President didn't have to fall?

A – He certainly didn't. As you know, the President is the best skier who ever lived in the White House.

But despite this it took great skill to fall exactly where the photographers were stationed. His Secret Servicemen were against it, but the President overruled them. The President said, "If I don't fall down once while I'm skiing, everyone will think I'm not a nice guy."

Q – Ron, when the President left for his skiing trip from the White House lawn, he tripped over the leashers of his dogs. Was that planned also?

A – Well, I'll be frank with you. I asked the President to trip over the dogs' leashes because we were trying to give you fellows a story for the afternoon papers. I knew the President wasn't going to make any news going to Vail for Christmas. But Iwas certain if he tripped over his dogs' leashes it would make the front pages -- and I was right.

Q – Ron, are you trying to tell us that every time the President stumbles, it is thought out in advance?

A – Let's say it's discussed beforehand. As you know, Mr. Ford is the most co-ordinated President we've ever had, so we don't want him to stumble too often. But when the occasion arises where we think a slip or a fallwill help his image, we urge him to do it.

Q – Whose idea was it for the President tofall down the steps getting off the plane in Salzburg last June?

A – Henry Kissinger's. He wanted to show President Sadat that we weren't putting pressure on him.

Q – So you feel President Ford's fall at Salzburg turned President Sadat around?

Q – Wouldn't you say the President was deceiving the American people by stumbling when he doesn't have to?

A – On the contrary, I think it helps his credibility. The difference between Mr. Ford and former Presidents is that we've only found out how badly they stumbled after they left office. President Ford has insisted the public know about his stumbling while he's still in the White House. Don't forget the President stumbled into his job, and since it worked then it should help him with his election.

Q – Is that it, Ron?

A – I heard a funny joke about the President the other day. It's really a Polish joke, but we switched it around to fit Mr. Ford. Would you like to hear it? Well, anyhow, there was a power failure at the White House and Mr. Ford was stuck on an escalator for three hours. Ha, ha, ha, ha. I'll pass on any new ones to you as soon as I hear them.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Cost of Nixon's Removal
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Government auditors are still trying to calculate exactly how much of the taxpayers' money was spent to remove Richard Nixon from the White House and to install him at San Clemente as a presidential pensioner.

The latest confidential General Accounting Office audit, which attempted to straighten out all the gifts the taxpayers have given to Nixon, was completed appropriately on Christmas Eve. Here are some of the highlights:

-- The federal paymasters had to do some fancy financial juggling before they could start paying Nixon his $5,000 monthly pension. They had no authorized funds, for example, until Congress belatedly voted a separate pension for Nixon. In the meantime, they made the initial payments from pension funds that had been earmarked for the widows of Presidents Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower and Lyndon Johnson.

-- Before Nixon's tapes and documents became tied up in litigation, the General Services Administration assigned 37 archivists and laborers to sift through his papers. This cost the taxpayers an estimated $102,000.

-- The deposed President completed the transition to civilian status, according to the bookkeepers, on Feb. 9, 1975. He then was given a $45,000 budget to last him until the end of the fiscal year on June 30. According to the confidential audit, he used $35,000 to pay the salaries of four assistants. He spent $7,200 for telephone and travel expenses. The rest went for supplies and equipment rental.

-- Nixon's transition budget, which expired on Feb. 9, was a flat $100,000. Of this, a startling $52,815.95 was spent for stationery, another $12,000 for postage. Apparently, he will have need for all that stationery. He has been snowed under with more than two million unanswered letters.

-- The former President was never charged for $265,580 in salaries paid to 54 federal workers who were "detailed" to him at first. Among them were his personal maid, butler, three chauffeurs and a medical corpsman. It cost the taxpayers $2,600, for example, to pay seven movers and packers to haul the Nixon's personal belongings out of the White House.

Nixon also should have paid $77,470 in rent for his oceaside office space. But GSA waived the rent last August.

Of course, Nixon is entitled under the law to the Secret Service protection. This runs the taxpayers $622,000 a year.

Footnote: The confidential report suggests that GSA at first was concerned that Nixon might not legally be entitled to any funds at all. But "the Justice Department determined that ... former President Nixon ... was entitled to the benefits provided by (two separate) acts."

WATCH ON WASTE: Not long ago, Randall Woods took a step up in Washington. He moved from the lowly Small Business Administration to the White House.

His associates at SBA were sorry to see him go. For Woods is a charming gentleman, manicured, soaped, pressed and pomaded, who has the sophistication of an experienced world traveler.

He should.

For as an assistant SBA administrator, he took an incredible 87 separate trips at the taxpayers' expense between June, 1972, and August, 1975. A list of his destinations reads like an atlas: Anchorage, Brussels, Denver, Honolulu, Los Angeles, New York City, Reno, Tucson, San Juan.

These are just a few of the cities Woods visited -- always, of course, on "official business." During one particularly active week in August, 1974, he made breathless stopovers in Anchorage, Chicago, Honolulu, Los Angeles and Seattle.

On another occasion, Woods flew to Puerto Rico to present a trophy. Another time, he journeyed to Belgium to attend an international business conference.

He spent more than $18,000 of the taxpayers' money on airplane tickets alone. He also drew $12,000 from the government in travel expeneses.

Woods doesn't think his travel was "exorbitant." He assured our associate Gary Cohn that the taxpayers got their money's wortth from his trips. Woods explained that he often flew to disaster areas to help small businessmen get back on their feet.

As a government bigwig, of course, he was able to justify the trips merely by stating that t hey were necessary for official business.

He's been passing out free copies of Jimmy Hoffa's "Hoffa: The Real Story" to fellow Congressmen. THROWING OUT THE BABY WITH THE BATH WATER

"Throwing out the baby with the bathwater" is a joke dating back to great- grandmother's day. Now the Congress seems determined to bring the joke back into circulation — except they're not joking.

We refer to the action by the House Subcommittee on the Postal Service, headed by Congressman James M. Hanley of New York, to forbid public use of coin-operated photocopy machines in Post Office lobbies across the country.

This is what happened. In 1974, the U.S. Postal Service initiated an over-the - counter sale of postal- related commercial products, such as self-inking stampers, automatic stamp dispensers, postal scales, and so forth. A business lobby representing retail stationery stores took strong action against the practice. Retreating before the pressure, the Hanley committee ordered the Post Office Service to discontinue the practice. It is important to note that at no time did the lobby express opposition against the photocopy machines. However, somewhere in the bureaucracy — and no one seems to know where — the order was issued by the Postal Service not only to discontinue the sale of postal- related products, but to kick out the non-offending photocopy machines as well.

Far from "competing with private enterprise," the photocopy machines are bought, paid for, and serviced by private enterprise. The business firms providing the machines pay sales andother taxes, and a royalty to the Postal Service. Since there is no cost to the government, the photocopy service provides pure profit to the government. Most important, the public is provided a convenient and popular service.

At this writing, however, the attitude of the Hanley committee appears to be, "to hell with the public." And clearly the attitude of bureaucracy is: "We made a mistake. But rather than admit it and correct it, we'll let it stand."

The television age has added hours to the time most Americans watch films and reduced the time many read. Part of the result can be seen in the failure of certain once- popular magazines in recent years.

Newspapers and books have not been adversely affected; book publishing has enjoyed good health in recent years and newspapers continue to grow. In fact, the addition of new newspapers supported by new shopping centers in metropolitan areas have forced mergers.

Yet reading remains, despite television, the greatest pleasure and source of information to many millions. It is a pastime one can enjoy when and where he or she wishes. The selection of reading material, also, is practically unlimited.

ANGOLA COUNTERACTION ESSENTIAL

The Soviet campaign to convert Angola into an African client state is not the first time Russia has interfered militarily in the affairs of black Africa. Fifteen years ago Moscow threw its weight behind Patrice Lumumba in the newly independent Belgian Congo (now Zaire) and Soviet cargo planes flew arms and supplies to his partisans.

That effort failed; Russia was too weak at the time to back up her hand. Also, the CIA was active behind the scenes. Today,the Soviet's Angola move is much more likely to succeed unless confronted by effective Western counteraction. The strategic stakes are also far greater. Angola has a long seacoast and if the Soviet- backed forces win the current civil war, then the U.S.S.R. stands to gain important air and naval bases astride the South Atlantic sea routes around the Cape of Good Hope. This will complete virtually the last link in the chain of Soviet global strategy at sea. With a system of bases almost world-wide, the already huge and still growing Soviet fleet will be able to operate in every ocean and make the U.S. naval mission of maintaining our overseas supply lines virtually impossible to fulfill.

As matters now stand, Russian ships are brazenly using the harbor of Luanda to unload considerable quantities of war material. Soviet advisers must necessarily be present to teach the black Angolans how to use the military equipment. Substantial numbers of Red Cubans are fighting on the side of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA). This Communist assistance has so far enabled the MPLA to stand off the attacks of its opponents and actually to advance in some areas. The Russian game seems to be to supply the MPLA with assistance long enough so that it is eventually recognized by the world as the "legitimate government" of Angola which can then enter into any sort of arrangement with the Soviets that it pleases. Without this Soviet assistance, many observers believe the MPLA would be quickly defeated.

What now remains to be seen is what leverage the U.S. will bring to bear on Moscow to cease its Angolan supply effort and how forcefully the Ford administration will use that leverage. The Soviets have gone as far as they have because they perceive a power vacuum in Angola and their sword has so far struck jelly rather than steel. This must change, and quickly. Henry Kissinger has issued a public warning that "the United States cannot remain indifferent" to Soviet and Cuban military intervention. This implies action on our part if the intervention continues. We await with interest the nature of that action.

Now that Gerald Ford has made the pilgrimage to Peking and been received by the living fossil of the Chinese Communist faith, Mao Tse-Tung, there should be no doubt in the minds of Americans that their President is a very important man.

But neither should there be any doubt about something else. And that is that this presidential visit, like the historic "reopening" of China by Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger three years ago, came about because, and only because, it serves the interests of the rulers of China to maintain friendly relations with the United States. Were it not for China's colossal fear of Russia, China today would be as self-isolated as it was in the days of Marco Polo, and the Chinese would be no more concerned about the distant world than their ancient emperors cared about affairs in the Rome of the Caesars. Even now, the ordinary Chinese, according to reporters accompanying the Ford entourage, express utter disinterest in learning what life is like for ordinary Americans.

Our diplomatic contacts with China since 1972 have been all one sided. No important Chinese official has visited this country. Our trade with China remains a drop in the bucket, even compared with our trade with far smaller nations.

China, at the present time, at least, has little that we need, and the Chinese seem determined to need as little as possible from us.

As for the rest of the world, however, the situation is entirely different. Rather than American presidents feeling compelled to show the flag—the presidential seal, that is—all over the world, if only to impress the folks back home, foreign leaders should be lining up to be received by us.

For the U.S. today is in a position of strength not approached by any other country.

There are only two other great powers in the world, and both of them actively court the friendship, or at least the neutrality, of the U.S. in their ideological struggle.

The Soviet Union is becoming more and more dependent upon American grain to feed its millions, as is much of the rest of the world. Compared to this dependency, the supposed stranglehold the oil sheiks have over the American economy has been vastly exaggerated.

The United States is no longer a youngster among nations. Our form of government is one of the oldest, and certainly one of the most resilient and adaptable. No domestic problem we face is beyond solution if we apply our wills and resources to it.

Yet we are guilty, apologetic and fearful for the fragility of our freedoms and way of life. Economists seriously wonder if our free enterprise system, the most successful the world has ever known, can long survive.

We seem still to be possessed of the old cold war fear that we are in a precarious state of siege, that we are surrounded by menacing forces which we must combat wherever they appear, even if it means adopting the methods of those who are anathema to everything we believe in.

We might well begin emulating the Chinese a little and let the world come to us—not out of any sense of smug superiority, but simply in the confident knowledge of the value of what we have to offer the world.

The U.S. is hardly the Heavenly Kingdom China once thought it was. But it is the center of the world in a way the emperors never dreamed of.

BETTING ON COMMON SENSE

While the cause of closing the breach in U.S. petroleum supplies appears to be lying dormant amidst controversy over who is to blame for the shortage, the truth is that work is going ahead in many areas, from Alaska's North Slope to preparations for moving greater quantities of imported petroleum.

With respect to the latter, a spokesman for the U.S. maritime industry reported late in 1973 that, since passage of the 1970 Merchant Marine Act, contracts for 50 new U.S.-flag vessels have been signed. Thirty-five of the 50 new ships are liquefied natural gas carriers and oil tankers, ranging in size from 35,000 to 265,000 DWT (deadweight tons)--the latter designated as Very Large Crude Carriers (VLCC). In addition, 92 tankers valued at $5.6 billion and varying from just under 40,000 to 400,000 DWT are in the planning stage. Super tankers offer both the economies of scale and greater safety when utilized in combination with "superports."

A U.S. Coast Guard analysis of world tanker casualties reveals that the accident probability for small tankers serving conventional ports is much greater than that for supertankers serving offshore deepwater ports. The offshore location of ths deepwater ports provides greater safety because they are removed from shallow waters and heavy ship traffic.

The U.S. Merchant Marine, like every segment of the energy industry, is planning for the future on the assumption of public support for the measures and technology that are the keys to meeting tomorrow's energy needs. They are betting on the common sense of the American people whose jobs and security are the high stakes involved in the energy crisis.

AGAIN, WE MUST HANG TOGETHER, OR...

"When in the course of human events the threat of extinction confronts mankind, it is necessary for the people of the United States to declare their interdependence with the peoples of all nations and to embrace those principles and build those institutions which will enable mankind to survive and civilization to flourish."

So reads the preamble to a "Declaration of Interdependence," a document written for today's world by noted historian Henry Steele Commager. The complete text will be read publicly for the first time in Philadelphia on October 24.

The new Declaration is one of five principal steps in a program developed by the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia to foster American actions to meet the challenges of global interdependence. Others include:

—A ceremonial singing of the Declaration by members of Congress and other Americans at Independence Hall in January, 1976.

—Arranging a series of "Interdependence Assemblies" and encouraging the study of interdependence in the nation's schools.

The World Affairs Council sees its role as that of a catalyst, to bring together distinguished leaders and experts to discuss and analyze the facts and issues shaping world affairs and American foreign policy.

Its program will actually run for 13 years, paralleling the span between 1776, when the Declaration of Independence was promulgated, and 1789, when the new system of federal government began to function under the U.S. Constitution.

Like that original Declaration, "it is recognized that this will be a beginning, not a conclusion of effort," says Frederick Heldring, chairman of the council's Bicentennial Era program.

Why a "Declaration of Interdependence"?

Because just as the founding fathers of the United States framed their Declaration on the basis of certain self-evident truths, new self-evident truths of an even more complex nature confront the United States and the whole world today.

The lives, fortunes and cultures of all peoples are threatened by worldwide imbalances of food, natural resources, intercontinental pollution, world population, crisis in the international monetary system and military armaments out of control, as well as a host of other threats to human development and order that transcend national boundaries, points out William W. Bodine Jr., president of the council.

"It is time," he says, "for daring initiatives by people concerned and responsible for the fate of mankind." It is the council's hope to reawaken the spirit that led to a mutuality of understanding among the American colonies and to kindle that same spirit for an understanding of mutuality among nations.

As the nation approaches its Bicentennial, says Bondine, "nothing could be more timely and relevant than to extend the concept of independence to interdependence."

CORPORATE RIPOFF: 'COLLAR' COMBINATION

One major area of crime in America not reflected in FBI statistics is so-called "white collar" crime.

Depending upon whose figures you care to cite, business is losing between $15 billion and $50 billion annually to crime, says Industry Week, with the vast majority of it resulting from internal, or employe, theft.

Ripping off the company is the common bond of both white and blue collar workers, says the magazine. If a company is missing $100,000, it's as likely that a vice president manipulated accounts payable records as it is that a warehouse clerk stole it by falsifying inventory records.

Employe crime ranges from the pilfering of pens, pencils and envelopes for home use to at least one instance where a corporate vice president and a shipping superintendent headed up a team of employes that stole by the truckload. Blue collar workers did the legwork and white collar workers handled the covering bookwork.

Although an estimated 87 per cent of employe crime is theft-related, a company may also be the victim of sabotage. This means not only literally throwing a wrench into a machine but such activities as disrupting schedules so that employes rack up more overtime.

Employe theft may be a significant cause of spiraling hospital costs, reports another publication, Modern Health care. It quotes New York security consultant Norman Jaspan to the effect that hospital costs could be reduced by as much as 15 per cent if employe thefts and other types of fraud were cut to a minimum.

These include such things as padded charges and kickbacks, falsification of labor vouchers, the use of hospital facilities, equipment and chemicals for outside sidelines, the diversion of funds from accounts receivable and the treating of patients at hospital expense by doctors who are paid personally.

If all this is bad news for business in general, it is good news for one business in particular. Increasing recognition of the severity of employe crime is boosting demand for security services, both guard and electronic.

One study shows spending for electronic security systems alone growing from $520 million in 1974 to $1.3 billion in 1984, with industry the major buyer.

OLD VIRTUES FAVORED

For the past 17 years, a major trading stamp company has conducted annual studies of public attitudes toward trading stamps. The findings of this company's latest survey are interesting for a number of reasons.

Perhaps most striking is the fact that more people like trading stamps than now have the chance to save them. While the number of households that save stamps declined to 64 per cent in 1973 from 70 percent the year before, the number of people who said they liked stamps rose to 71 percent in 1973 from 66 percent in 1972. Illustrating consumer loyalty, some 81 percent of shoppers who patronized stamp-giving supermarkets said they would be disappointed if those stores dropped stamps. This seems to indicate that when service stations and other businesses drop stamp-giving promotions, the millions of people who are subsequently deprived of the opportunity to save stamps feel they have lost something of value.

The vice president for economics of the trading stamp firm that conducted the survey attributes the evident loyalty of stamp savers to stamp-giving businesses to several factors: "The discount label many food chains adopted in the late sixties and early seventies appears to be losing some of its credibility. What seems to be happening is that people recognize that rising prices, especially when identified with supermarkets which have dropped trading stamps, just can't be attributed to the stamps. To a degree, people may be saying: 'They took away my stamps and gave me higher prices!'"

The survey may also show that consumers are rediscovering the old virtues of freedom of choice, promotion and advertising, competition, and the manner in which all of the forces of a free market work to fill the valleys and level the peaks of supply and demand. Perhaps consumers are even beginning to suspect the truth that many of the absurdities in today's marketplace are traceable to too much government interference.

'OH RON! POOR RON!"

WASHINGTON — Ron Nessen has been complaining about the clumsy image the media has been giving President Ford. Angered by the press coverage devoted to Mr. Ford's fall in the snow while skiing, Nessen told reportes it was "the most unconscionable misrepresentation of a President" he'd ever heard of.

He went on to say that President Ford was the "best co-ordinated President in history."

Now any press secretary worth his salt should know you don't get anywhere by complaining about the image the media is presenting of a President. What you do is turn an act of clumsiness into one of skill and dexterity.

I don't like to tell the White Houe press severtary how to run his business, but this would have been a much better way to handle the situation.

The afternoon briefing at Vail:

Q -- Ron, we have a report that the President fell while skiing today. What do you have on that?

A -- Yes, the President fell as planned this afternoon in six inches of snow near a large Aspen tree.

Q -- As planned, Ron?

A -- That's correct. Before he left Washington, the President made plans to fall just once so all the photographers would get the only picture they had made the trip for.

Q -- You mean the President didn't have to fall?

A -- He certainly didn't. As you know, the President is the best skier who ever lived in the White House.

But despite this it took great skill to fall exactly where the photographers were stationed. His Secret Servicemen were against it, but the President overruled them. The President said, "If I don't fall down once while I'm skiing, everyone will think I'm not a nice guy."

Q -- Ron, when the President left for his skiing trip from the White House lawn, he tripped over the leashers of his dogs. Was that planned also?

A -- Well, I'll be frank with you. I asked the President to trip over the dogs' leashes because we were trying to give you fellows a story for the afternoon papers. I knew the President wasn't going to make any news going to Vail for Christmas. But Iwas certain if he tripped over his dogs' leashes it would make the front pages -- and I was right.

Q -- Ron, are you trying to tell us that every time the President stumbles, it is thought out in advance?

A -- Let's say it's discussed beforeheand. As you know, Mr. Ford is the most co-ordinated President we've ever had, so we don't want him to stumble too often. But when the occasion arises where we think a slip or a fallwill help his image, we urge him to do it.

Q -- Whose idea was it for the President tofall down the steps getting off the plane in Salzburg last June?

A -- Henry Kissinger's. He wanted to show President Sadat that we weren't putting pressure on him.

Q -- So you feel President Ford's fall at Salzburg turned President Sadat around?

Q -- Wouldn't you say the President was deceiving the American people by stumbling when he doesn't have to?

A -- On the contrary, I think it helps his credibility. The difference between . Mr. Ford and former Presidents is that we've only found out how badly they stumbled after they left office. President Ford has insisted the public know about his stumbling while he's still in the White House. Don't forget the President stumbled into his job, and since it worked then it should help him with his election.

Q -- Is that it, Ron?

A -- I heard a funny joke about the President the other day. It's really a Polish joke, but we switched it around to fit Mr. Ford. Would you like to hear it? Well, anyhow, there was a power failure at the White House and Mr. Ford was stuck on an escalator for three hours. Ha, ha, ha, ha. I'll pass on any new ones to you as soon as I hear them.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Cost of Nixon's Removal
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Government auditors are still trying to calculate exactly how much of the taxpayers' money was spent to remove Richard Nixon from the White House and to install him at San Clemente as a presidential pensioner.

The latest confidential General Accounting Office audit, which attempted to straighten out all the gifts the taxpayers have given to Nixon, was completed appropriately on Christmas Eve. Here are some of the highlights:

-- The federal paymasters had to do some fancy financial juggling before they could start paying Nixon his $5,000 monthly pension. They had no authorized funds, for example, until Congress belatedly voted a separate pension for Nixon. In the meantime, they made the initial payments from pension funds that had been earmarked for the widows of Presidents Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower and Lyndon Johnson.

-- Before Nixon's tapes and documents became tied up in litigation, the General Services Administration assigned 37 archivists and laborers to sift through his papers. This cost the taxpayers an estimated $102,000.

-- The deposed President completed the transition to civilian status, according to the bookkeepers, on Feb. 9, 1975. He then was given a $45,000 budget to last him until the end of the fiscal year on June 30. According to the confidential audit, he used $35,000 to pay the salaries of four assistants. He spent $7,200 for telephone and travel expenses. The rest went for supplies and equipment rental.

-- Nixon's transition budget, which expired on Feb. 9, was a flat $100,000. Of this, a startling $52,815.95 was spent for stationery, another $12,000 for postage. Apparently, he will have need for all that stationery. He has been snowed under with more than two million unanswered letters.

-- The former President was never charged for $265,580 in salaries paid to 54 federal workers who were "detailed" to him at first. Among them were his personal maid, butler, three chauffeurs and a medical corpsman. It cost the taxpayers $2,600, for example, to pay seven movers and packers to haul the Nixon's personal belongings out of the White House.

Nixon also should have paid $77,470 in rent for his oceaside office space. But GSA waived the rent last August.

Of course, Nixon is entitled under the law to the Secret Service protection. This runs the taxpayers $622,000 a year.

Footnote: The confidential report suggests that GSA at first was concerned that Nixon might not legally be entitled to any funds at all. But "the Justice Department determined that ... former President Nixon ... was entitled to the benefits provided by .(two separate) acts."

WATCH ON WASTE: Not long ago, Randall Woods took a step up in Washington. He moved from the lowly Small Business Administration to the White House.

His associates at SBA were sorry to see him go. For Woods is a charming gentleman, manicured, soaped, pressed and pomaded, who has the sophistication of an experienced world traveler.

He should.

For as an assistant SBA administrator, he took an incredible 87 separate trips at the taxpayers' expense between June, 1972, and August, 1975. A list of his destinations reads like an atlas: Anchorage, Brussels, Denver, Honolulu, Los Angeles, New York City, Reno, Tucson, San Juan.

These are just a few of the cities Woods visited -- always, of course, on "official business." During one particularly active week in August, 1974, he made breathless stopovers in Anchorage, Chicago, Honolulu, Los Angeles and Seattle.

On another occasion, Woods flew to Puerto Rico to present a trophy. Another time, he journeyed to Belgium to attend an international business conference.

He spent more than $18,000 of the taxpayers' money on airplane tickets alone. He also drew $12,000 from the government in travel expeneses.

Woods doesn't think his travel was "exorbitant." He assured our associate Gary Cohn that the taxpayers got their money's worth from his trips. Woods explained that he often flew to disaster areas to help small businessmen get back on their feet.

As a government bigwig, of course, he was able to justify the trips merely by stating that t hey were necessary for official business.

Edgart Hoover had his aides buy him a garbage compactor to block our Great Garbage Caper: our search of Hoover's garbage to burlesque his own FBI snooping techniques. He's been passing out free copies of Jimmy Hoffa's "Hoffa: The Real Story" to fellow Congressmen. Hospital escapees arrested in Fisk

FISK — Butler County Sheriff's deputies and Fisk Marshal Ben Wilson Sunday night arrested four escapees from the Illinois State Hospital at Elgin. The four escapees had been described by Illinois officials as S"very dangerous."

Chief Deputy James Kimbrow and Deputy Alton Gill spotted the four wanted men in a stole n car at about 9:30 p.m. Sunday on Greeson Street in Fisk.

"We just happened to be a t Fisk when Gill noticed the out-of-state plates and I noticed it was an oldsmobile," Kimbrow said. He said the stolen Oldsmobile and a dispatch on the escapees had been reported by the Highway Patrol.

"Kimbrow said he and Gill followed the car for several blocks before stopping it.

"They didn't seem to want to pull over," Kimbrow said. "But we stopped them and yelled 'Get out of the car,' and they seemed to get the message."

None of the escapees offered resistance during the arrest, Kimbrow said.

The deputies reported recovering 15 bottles of various kinds of pills and the wallet of the hospital attendant.

The escapees were identified as Tom F. Vitor, 16, McHenry, Ill.; Paul E. Canady, 17, Elgin; Bobby L. Phillips, 16, Peoria; and Kenneth Schneider, 17, Elgin.

Kimbrow said the four apparently had been sent to the state hospital for test ing from the Illinois Department of Corrections.The deputy said he has been unable tto learn the nature of the charge against the escapees.

Kimbrow said no weapon was found by the arre sting officers.

Illinois authorities were contacted this morning and arrangements were being made to return the four escapees to the hospital.

Scott City approves attorney for hearing

SCOTT CITY–The City Council learned Monday night that the chlorine dispenser for the new water treatment plant was shipped Dec. 29 and should arrive very soon.

The dispenser, called a contactor, releases chlorine into the water after every 100 gallons are used.

Mechanical Systems of Sikeston, the firm working on the water treatment plant, said it would take approximately two days to put the plant into operation after the contractor arrives.

A contract was awarded to Smitten-Winters Equipment Co. of Sikeston in the amount of $3,463.65 to repair the pump on number two well.

The city has had water supplied by Illmo since the pump in number two well became defective in early December. That is the reason for the water pressure being so low, the city said.

A new bid for lift station repair was accepted by the council from Brooks Service Co. The bid of $25,311 is $14,927 less than the original bid of $40,238 submitted in December by the firm. Reason for the lowering of the bid is that an emergency generator included in the original bid is no longer required.

Mayor Jim Cauble reported following a meeting earlier Monday night with the mayors of Illmo and Kelso, representatives of the department of Natural Resources, Ron Yersak of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission, that he was recommending that the city withdraw its application for a feasibility study grant for sewage treatment, and instead let the city of Illmo make application for the funding that would include the needs of all three communities.

The federal government will provide 90 per cent of the study's funds and the three communities will provide the other 10 per cent, apportioned on a population basis.

City Attorney Thomas Arnold of Benton, told the council by letter that a public Service Commission hearing would be held Jan. 9 in Jefferson City on a suit filed by the city of Cape Girardeau against Missouri Utilities Company charging that the city was being discriminated against by higher utility rates.

The letter asked if the council wanted Arnold to represent Scott City at this hearing.

The council approved having the attorney represent the city at this hearing.

After considerating a letter from the state attorney general's office which said the city was not complying with a state law on submitting bid offers on municipal insurance coverage, the council was decided to notify the attorney general that the discrepancy was corrected long before notification was received from his office. The council's reply will also say this discrepancy existed before the present board was formed.

A meeting has been set for 10 a.m. Jan. 31 to discuss the codification of city ordinances with representatives of the Missouri Municipal League.

Hayti school fire blamed on arson

HAYTI, — Authorities said Monday arson was to blame for a fire that damaged four classrooms and a study center at Hayti High School.

A policeman spotted the blaze early Monday and firemen were able to prevent extensive damage.

Officials declined to speculate as to the damage, saying there was "considerable fire damage" in one of the rooms, and smoke and water damage in three other rooms.

"It was definitely arson," said Principal Norman Nelson. "Whoever did it obviously tried to burn the school down."

Nelson said a combustible fluid was sprinkled in hallways and classrooms.

Fire was set to posters in the classroom most damaged, although efforts to burn an American flag and papers in a hallway apparently were unsuccessful, he said.

Police said entry to the building was gained through an abandoned coal shaft in the basement.

Hospital escapees arrested in Fisk

FISK — Butler County Sheriff's deputies and Fisk Marshal Ben Wilson Sunday night arrested four escapees from the Illinois State Hospital at Elgin. The four escapees had been described by Illinois officials as S"very dangerous."

Chief Deputy James Kimbrow and Deputy Alton Gill spotted the four wanted men in a stole n car at about 9:30 p.m. Sunday on Greeson Street in Fisk.

"We just happened to be a t Fisk when Gill noticed the out-of-state plates and I noticed it was an oldsmobile," Kimbrow said. He said the stolen Oldsmobile and a dispatch on the escapees had been reported by the Highway Patrol.

"Kimbrow said he and Gill followed the car for several blocks before stopping it.

"They didn't seem to want to pull over," Kimbrow said. "But we stopped them and yelled 'Get out of the car,' and they seemed to get the message."

None of the escapees offered resistance during the arrest, Kimbrow said.

The deputies reported recovering 15 bottles of various kinds of pills and the wallet of the hospital attendant.

The escapees were identified as Tom F. Vitor, 16, McHenry, Ill.; Paul E. Canady, 17, Elgin; Bobby L. Phillips, 16, Peoria; and Kenneth Schneider, 17, Elgin.

Kimbrow said the four apparently had been sent to the state hospital for test ing from the Illinois Department of Corrections.The deputy said he has been unable tto learn the nature of the charge against the escapees.

Kimbrow said no weapon was found by the arre sting officers.

Illinois authorities were contacted this morning and arrangements were being made to return the four escapees to the hospital.

Blue whales inhabit the colder seas and migrate to warmer waters in winter for breeding.

Scott City approves attorney for hearing

SCOTT CITY--The City Council learned Monday night that the chlorine dispenser for the new water treatment plant was shipped Dec. 29 and should arrive very soon.

The dispenser, called a contactor, releases chlorine into the water after every 100 gallons are used.

Mechanical Systems of Sikeston, the firm working on the water treatment plant, said it would take approximately two days to put the plant into operation after the contractor arrives.

A contract was awarded to Smitten-Winters Equipment Co. of Sikeston in the amount of $3,463.65 to repair the pump on number two well.

The city has had water supplied by Illmo since the pump in number two well became defective in early December. That is the reason for the water pressure being so low, the city said.

A new bid for lift station repair was accepted by the council from Brooks Service Co. The bid of $25,311 is $14,927 less than the original bid of $40,238 submitted in December by the firm. Reason for the lowering of the bid is that an emergency generator included in the original bid is no longer required.

Mayor Jim Cauble reported following a meeting earlier Monday night with the mayors of Illmo and Kelso, representatives of the department of Natural Resources, Ron Yersak of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission, that he was recommending that the city withdraw its application for a feasibility study grant for sewage treatment, and instead let the city of Illmo make application for the funding that would include the needs of all three communities.

The federal government will provide 90 per cent of the study's funds and the three communities will provide the other 10 per cent, apportioned on a population basis.

City Attorney Thomas Arnold of Benton, told the council by letter that a public Service Commission hearing would be held Jan. 9 in Jefferson City on a suit filed by the city of Cape Girardeau against Missouri Utilities Company charging that the city was being discriminated against by higher utility rates.

The letter asked if the council wanted Arnold to represent Scott City at this hearing.

The council approved having the attorney represent the city at this hearing.

After considerating a letter from the state attorney general's office which said the city was not complying with a state law on submitting bid offers on municipal insurance coverage, the council was decided to notify the attorney general that the discrepancy was corrected long before notification was received from his office. The council's reply will also say this discrepancy existed before the present board was formed.

A meeting has been set for 10 a.m. Jan. 31 to discuss the codification of city ordinances with representatives of the Missouri Municipal League.

Hayti school fire blamed on arson

HAYTI, — Authorities said Monday arson was to blame for a fire that damaged four classrooms and a study center at Hayti High School.

A policeman spotted the blaze early Monday and firemen were able to prevent extensive damage.

Officials declined to speculate as to the damage, saying there was "considerable fire damage" in one of the rooms, and smoke and water damage in three other rooms.

"It was definitely arson," said Principal Norman Nelson. "Whoever did it obviously tried to burn the school down."

Nelson said a combustible fluid was sprinkled in hallways and classrooms.

Fire was set to posters in the classroom most damaged, although efforts to burn an American flag and papers in a hallway apparently were unsuccessful, he said.

Police said entry to the building was gained through an abandoned coal shaft in the basement.

Challenges expected on PCS actions

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Court challenges are expected as early as this week to controversial Missouri Public Service Commission decisions creating strict utility bill procedures and authorizing the largest monetary rate hike granted a regulated utility.

The PSC opened the way for the court reviews Monday, denying requests that final decisions in both cases be delayed until more hearings are held.

Rejection was unanimous on the request of 17 utilities, including the state's largest ones, for further investigation on the uniform standards for billing and service procedures of all regulated electric, gas and water companies.

Among other things, those standards, which received unanimous commission approval last month, prohibit late payment penalties and severely limit instances in which deposits can becharged.

The commission, on a 3-1 vote with one abstension, also denied requests to reopen the Union Electric Co. rate increase case, in which the utility was authorized a 14 per cent hike in rates to generate an additional $50.9 million a year.

Commissioner James P. Mulvaney, who opposed the rate hike when it was under initial consideration, was the lone member favoring reopening the case. Commissioner Hugh Sprague abstained because he had not read all the case transcripts.

In the billing practices case, most utility officials declined any immediate comment on future courses of action.

But Judith Rea, attorney for the Missouri Public Service Co. of Raytown, predicted the so-called "consumer Bill of Rights" would be appealed on the grounds that it infringes on management perogatives to operate businesses as the managers see fit.

She also said an injunction would probably be sought to halt implementation of the far-reaching regulations pending the outcome of a court case.

"But I'll have to talk with the others (utility officials)," she said. "I would not be surprised if there were a meeting this week" concerning court moves.

Without an injunction, utilities would have until June 26 to comply with the new regulations or obtain an exemption from compliance.

While PSC Chairman A. Robert Pierce has expressed reservations about some of the regulations, other commission members have claimed they only require utilities to employ "good business practices."

Alberta Slavin of the Utility Consumers Council of Missouri said court review will be sought "as quickly as we can get the papers prepared."

Woman to be named ambassador to England

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anne Armstrong, former co-chairman of the Republican National Committee and presidential counselor, will be named U.S. ambassador to Great Britain, officials here say.

A White House announcement is expected soon after formal agreement is given by the British government. British officials in Washington said privately they would have no objection to her appointment.

State Department officials said they foresaw no problem in obtaining Senate confirmation.

U.S. officials privately confirmed reports of Mrs. Armstrong's appointment Monday. She would succeed Elliot L. Richardson as U.S. ambassador to the Court of St. James's in London. Richardson is leaving that post to become secretary of commerce.

If nominated and confirmed, Mrs. Armstrong, 48, would be the first American woman named ambassador to a major embassy since Claire Booth Luce served as U.S. ambassador to Rome from 1953 to 1957. In addition, she would be the first woman envoy named by a major country to London, officials said.

Mrs. Armstrong served as co-chairman of the Republican National Committee for two years from January 1971 and then held the $42,500-post of presidential counselor for nearly two years under Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald Ford. She resigned her White House post in December 1974.

In the White House, where Mrs. Armstrong was then the highest ranking woman in the government, her duties included political liaison in women's affairs and special projects concerning the Bicentennial.

She also served as a member of the Cabinet-level Council of Wage and Price Stability from August 1974 to May 1975 and has held several excutive positions in the private sector.

Mrs. Armstrong is the wife of a Texas millionaire-rancher and mother of five children. The family lives in Armstrong, Tex.

Abortion is not only issue in court case on state law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The court case involving Missouri's abortion law includes issues other than the controversy over abortion, Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth said Monday in a brief filed with the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Those issues include the right of the legislature to define the obligaions and responsibilities of marriage, the rights of children vis a vis the responsibilities of parents and the authority of government to regulate the practice of medicine," Danforth said in a copy of the brief given to reporters here.

Missouri's abortion law is being reviewed by the nation's highest court, which ruled three years ago this month that abortions were legal and that states may not prohibit the pregnancy-terminating operations during the first 12 weeks of a woman's pregnancy. The Missouri law, which was approved by the General Assembly in 1974 in response to the high court's ruling, requires the consent of the husband of a married woman or the consent of parents of an unmarried woman under 18 before an abortion can be performed. It also provides that if a live birth results from an intended abortion, the parents lose their parental rights and the child becomes a ward of the state.

The law also prohibits the saline injection method of abortion after the first 12 weeks of pregnancy, requires physicians to keep specified records and redefines viability.

The law was taken to the U.S. Suprme Cout by the Planned Parenthood of Central Missouri after it was upheld by a three-judge federal panel in St. Louis Jan. 31, 1975.

That organiztion has contended the law violates the constitutional rights of patients desiring abortions and of doctors who permormed them.

Dr. David Hall, chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Missouri Medical School, and Dr. Michael Freiman, a St. Lous obstetrician and gynecologist, are two doctors included in the appeal.

They told the court in October that new guidance is needed from the Supreme Court so that legislatures "will not continue cavalierly to pass legislagion which violates the spirit, intent and meaning" of the 1973 ruling.

They also told the court that at one St. Louis clinic, 49 women per month were denied abortions for lack of their husband's consent, and 31 girls because they failed to obtain parental consent.

The law went into effect June 14, 1974 when it was signed by Gov. Christopher . Bond, but enforcement o vChristopher . Bond, but but enforcement of the law was suspended last Feb. 18 when the Suprme Court considered taking the case.

However in his brief, Danforth said the case goes beyond the abortion controversy to determine the extent to which the Supreme Court "will substitute its judgment on questions of domestic relations and public health for the judgment of a state legislature."

The brief said consent of the spouse and parents, and the saline injection method are the issues which go beyond the abortion controversy.

It said that absolute independence of married persons is prohibited in the institution of marriage, and that approval of both parties is needed for such things as placing a child up for adoption.

It said that minors do not have the same rights as adults under many state laws, and that "where discretion and decision making are involved, the legislature may properly provide that parental guidance is necessary" in abortion situations.

The brief also said that doctors have no "right" to practice medicine and that "federal and state governments have the power to prohibit certain medical practices."

It said the court should leave the judgment of certain medical practices, in this case the saline solution method, up to the legislature.

A similar Massachusetts law will be considered by the Supreme Court along with Missouri's statute.

Women staying single longer

If two's company and three's a crowd, what's one? Usually a single, the saying goes. Among those 53 million unattached adult Americans who include the widowed and divorced, the never-marrieds are a rapidly-growing group.

The proportion of women who remain single until they are 20 years old has increased by one-third since 1960, reports the Institute of Life Insurance.

And today's average age of marriage is 21, the highest in history. That is, if you don't count the depression years of the early 1930s when many marriages were delayed and as a result, a near-record 9 per cent of women 50 years old had never married.

Why are women getting married later? Many agree with the sentiments of humorist Jean Kerr who said: "Marrying a man is like buying something you've been admiring for a long time in a shop window. You may love it when you get home, but it doesn't always go with everything else in the house." Some women may just like to take a longer time window-shopping.

Who are today's singles? According to the Bureau of Census, they predominate among young college-educated women. In fact, a great many single women—of all ages—have more education, better jobs and higher incomes.

In 1970, for example, one in every five women around 40 years of age with some graduate school education or an income of $20,000 or more had not married, as compared with only one in every 20 women in that age group who had no college education.

One reason for the delay in marriage among young women is that they take time out for college, demographers point out. Nearly three times as many women were enrolled in universities in 1972 as in the previous decade.

However, while higher education is a factor in singleness, nyone considering dusting off such joke-file memorabilia as the ather's Advice—"It cost me 3000 to send my daughter to ollege and it took her four years o get a husband. I spent $300 to send my other daughter to the each and she got married right way. . . . I recommend the each."—may be in for a surrise. Despite the fact that colege-educated women still domiate the single ranks, census gures show that starting with he 1960s, the increase in singleess was greatest among young women who had not attended college.

The women's movement as a factor in singleness? So far, the government's findings add up to a chicken-or-the-egg debate. According to the Bureau's Paul C. Glick, it isn't at all clear whether the surfeit of single women in the last few years "has contributed to the development of the movement, or the ideology of the movement has contributed to the increase in singleness."

Whatever the reasons for singleness, the unattached female as well as male, and their life styles, have in recent years proved to be of interest not only to demographers and sociologists but also to marketers.

Today's "singles" constitute a vast market for a variety of goods and services, ranging from single-occupancy dwellings in co-ed apartment house complexes to dating services, concert tickets, travel clubs, not to mention one-cup percolators and TV dinners.

Ann Landers

Ann urges strong gun laws

Dear Ann: Tonight at 9:55 p.m. our phone rang. Dad answered. We could tell from his responses that it was bad news.

It was the mother of a dear friend who had just died. The week before, HER phone had rung. It was the sheriff asking her to come to the hospital. Her son had been shot in the head while driving down one of the main streets in Omaha.

He was only 33 -- a wonderful person, no enemies, no reason why anyone would wish him dead. But someone took a shot at him -- and now he is gone forever. The agony of this man's parents is unbearable. He was their only child.

There are no clues as to who committed this senseless murder. They will probably never find the killler. It makes me sick to know that whoever did this awful thing is out there somewhere -- walking around with that gun. God knows who will be next. -- America, What's Happening To You?

Dear America: That's a good question. One of the answers is this: There are at least 90 million guns out there and many are in the hands of crazy, irresponsible people. Again I am asking all concerned citizens to urge their Congressmen and Senators to pass a strong federal gun law. Every poll taken shows that the vast majority of Americans WANT it. Are the gun manufacturers and lobbies in Washinngton stronger than the voice of the people? Let us make ourselves heard.

Dear Ann Landers: I am going to pieces. My husband has accepted a new job – a substantial promotion. It means he will be out of town six nights at a time, once a month.

I know a man cannot go that many days in a row without sex. The thought of my husband sleeping with another woman is driving me crazy. I have small children and cannot travel with him.

Am I being childish and possessive? Do I need to see a psychiatrist? I'm frightened of my feelings. Please help me. – Mrs. X

Dear Mrs. X.: The notion that a man can't go without sex for six days is cuckoo. You need to talk to a therapist and learn why you are so insecure and why you feel so threatened. Get moving, Lady.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 16, a high school junior, and pregnant by a boy I don't love. I can't figure out how I got into this fix. It must have been too much booze.

I'm about nine weeks along and the doctor says I am P.G. for sure. The boy responsible says he will pay half the cost of an abortion. My mother and dad will pay the other half. The problem is I don't want an abortion because I'm afraid it will leave a scar on my mind forever.

I am not a Catholic, but I have this feeling about murdering an unborn child. My friends think I'm crazy but I want to go to a home for unwed mothers, have the baby and put it up for adoption.

Please tell me if you think I am out of my mind. My parents will let me make the final decision but they are trying very hard to get me to see things their way. Help me, please. -- Annabelle

Dear Annabelle: This decision should be yours and yours alone. If you fear the psychological consequences of an abortion, then don't have one. For some 16-year olds it's the best solution, but for you it might be the worst.

Mini-conferences on art programs planned

Mini-conferences to help area organizations and individuals become better acquainted with Missouri State Council on the Arts (MSCA) programs have been scheduled for Thursday in Sikeston and Friday in Portageville.

The staff of MSCA will conduct the conferences from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Ramada Inn in Sikeston on Thursday and the auditorium of the Delta Center at Portageville on Friday.

The conferences are being offered by MSCA in cooperation with the University of Missouri Extension Division.

Area schools are cooperating with various arts groups and the MSCA to bring programs to the student body and community at large. Among the programs during the past year were the Bil Baird Marionette Theatre, nationally known mime artists Bert Houle and Sophie Wibaux and the Loretta Hilton's Children's Theatre performance "American Heritage".

Those interested in encouraging community participation in a variety of programs are invited to attend the conferences. For further information contact the local extension center or Kathryn Kinnard at the Delta Center, telephone number 379-5431.

Woman to be named ambassador to England

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anne Armstrong, former co-chairman of the Republican National Committee and presidential counselor, will be named U.S. ambassador to Great Britain, officials here say.

A White House announcement is expected soon after formal agreement is given by the British government. British officials in Washington said privately they would have no objection to her appointment.

State Department officials said they foresaw no problem in obtaining Senate confirmation.

U.S. officials privately confirmed reports of Mrs. Armstrong's appointment Monday. She would succeed Elliot L. Richardson as U.S. ambassador to the Court of St. James's in London. Richardson is leaving that post to become secretary of commerce.

If nominated and confirmed, Mrs. Armstrong, 48, would be the first American woman named ambassador to a major embassy since Claire Booth Luce served as U.S. ambassador to Rome from 1953 to 1957. In addition, she would be the first woman envoy named by a major country to London, officials said.

Mrs. Armstrong served as co-chairman of the Republican National Committee for two years from January 1971 and then held the $42,500-post of presidential counselor for nearly two years under Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald Ford. She resigned her White House post in December 1974.

In the White House, where Mrs. Armstrong was then the highest ranking woman in the government, her duties included political liaison in women's affairs and special projects concerning the Bicentennial.

She also served as a member of the Cabinet-level Council of Wage and Price Stability from August 1974 to May 1975 and has held several excutive positions in the private sector.

Mrs. Armstrong is the wife of a Texas millionaire-rancher and mother of five children. The family lives in Armstrong, Tex.

Abortion is not only issue in court case on state law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The court case involving Missouri's abortion law includes issues other than the controversy over abortion, Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth said Monday in a brief filed with the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Those issues include the right of the legislature to define the obligaions and responsibilities of marriage, the rights of children vis a vis the responsibilities of parents and the authority of government to regulate the practice of medicine," Danforth said in a copy of the brief given to reporters here.

Missouri's abortion law is being reviewed by the nation's highest court, which ruled three years ago this month that abortions were legal and that states may not prohibit the pregnancy-terminating operations during the first 12 weeks of a woman's pregnancy. The Missouri law, which was approved by the General Assembly in 1974 in response to the high court's ruling, requires the consent of the husband of a married woman or the consent of parents of an unmarried woman an under 18 before an abortion can be performed. It also provides that if a live birth results from an intended abortion, the parents lose their parental rights and the child becomes a ward of the state.

The law also prohibits the saline injection method of abortion after the first 12 weeks of pregnancy, requires physicians to keep specified records and redefines viability.

The law was taken to the U.S. Suprme Cout by the Planned Parenthood of Central Missouri after it was upheld by a three-judge federal panel in St. Louis Jan. 31, 1975.

That organiztion has contended the law violates the constitutional rights of patients desiring abortions and of doctors who permormed them.

Dr. David Hall, chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Missouri Medical School, and Dr. Michael Freiman, a St. Lous obstetrician and gynecologist, are two doctors included in the appeal.

They told the court in October that new guidance is needed from the Supreme Court so that legislatures "will not continue cavalierly to pass legislagion which violates the spirit, intent and meaning" of the 1973 ruling.

They also told the court that at one St. Louis clinic, 49 women per month were denied abortions for lack of their husband's consent, and 31 girls because they failed to obtain parental consent.

The law went into effect June 14, 1974 when it was signed by Gov. Christopher . Bond, but enforcement o vChristopher . Bond, but but enforcement of the law was suspended last Feb. 18 when the Suprme Court considered taking the case.

However in his brief, Danforth said the case goes beyond the abortion controversy to determine the extent to which the Supreme Court "will substitute its judgment on questions of domestic relations and public health for the judgment of a state legislature."

The brief said consent of the spouse and parents, and the saline injection method are the issues which go beyond the abortion controversy.

It said that absolute independence of married persons is prohibited in the institution of marriage, and that approval of both parties is needed for such things as placing a child up for adoption.

It said that minors do not have the same rights as adults under many state laws, and that "where discretion and decision making are involved, the legislature may properly provide that parental guidance is necessary" in abortion situations.

The brief also said that doctors have no "right" to practice medicine and that "federal and state governments have the power to prohibit certain medical practices."

It said the court should leave the judgment of certain medical practices, in this case the saline solution method, up to the legislature.

A similar Massachusetts law will be considered by the Supreme Court along with Missouri's statute.

Three Cards named to NFL all-pro first team

NEW YORK (AP) — Record-shattering quarterback Fran Tarkenton of the Minnesota Vikings heads the National Football League All-Pro team selected by The Associated Press and announced today.

Joining Tarkenton in the All-Pro backfield are runners Chuck Foreman of Minnesota and O.J. Simpson of Buffalo. Speedy Cliff Branch of Oakland and Mel Gray of St. Louis are the wide receivers with Denver's Riley Odoms chosen at tight end.

Mel Blount of Pittsburgh and Roger Wehrli of St. Louis are the cornerbacks with Minnesota's Paul Krause at free safety and Ken Houston of Washington at strong safety.

Tarkenton enjoyed a brilliant season, directing the Vikings to their seventh NFC Central division title in the last eight years. The veteran quarterback shattered three of Johnny Unitas' career passing records, setting new marks for attempts (5,225), completions (2,931) and touchdowns (291). The Minnesota quarterback led all NFC passers, completing 64.2 per cent of his attempts and hurling 25 touchdown passes.

His favorite target was Foreman, who led the NFL with 73 catches, the most ever for a running back. Foreman also led the conference with 22 touchdowns and rushed for a club record 1,070 yards.

Simpson rushed for a league-leading 1,817 yards and set a single season record with 23 touchdowns, one more than Gale Sayers had for the Chicago Bears in 1965.

Branch caught 51 passes for 893 yards and nine touchdowns for the AFC West champion Raiders. Gray grabbed 48 for 926 yards and 11 TDs for the Cardinals, champions of the NFC East. Odoms had 40 catches for 540 yards for Denver.

Bakken connected on 19 of 24 attempted field goals and scored 97 points.

On defense, Blount and Krause led their respective conferences in interceptions. Blount picked off 11 passes, returning them for 121 yards. Krause had 10 interceptions and 201 yards in returns.

Krause and Page anchored a Minnesota defense that led the league. Pittsburgh was second in the AFC on a defense constructed largely around Ham and Greenwood, whose play helped overcome the loss of Joe Greene, out for five games because of a pinched nerve in his neck.

Scott Bull (19), University of Arkansas quarterback, is hauled down by Brad Thompson (79) and Dicky Clark (87) of Georgia in the first quarter of the Cotton Bowl game in Dallas on New Year's Day. Bull gained three yards on the play. (AP Wirephoto)

Coach Ford Morgan's eighth grade basketballers won their second game of the season against one loss here Monday night defeating the Caruthersville Tigers 39-15 in an A game and 40-8 in a B game.

Coach Morgan tried out his new half-court zone trap and it worked very well as Caruthersville was unable to score in the first quarter while the Bulldogs were racking up 10. Sikeston led 27-4 at the half.

Andy Rogers dropped in 13 points for Sikeston while Allen scored six for Caruthersville.

The Bulldogs defense was even more effective against the Tigers B squad as Caruthersville was unable to score a single point in the first half. Sikeston led 22-0 at the intermission.

Terrace Howard scored 14 points to lead the Bulldogs in scoring. Johnson led the Tigers with four.

Sikeston's eighth and ninth grade teams travel to Cape Girardeau Tuesday night. The eighth grade team will be seeking revenge for an earlier loss to the young Tigers. Thirteen prep games are scheduled for tonight

By BILL HARRISON

The schedule picks up in the new year like it never did in the old one. The 4A schools start their schedule in earnest this month and continue through until the regional tournaments in March.

The Puxico High School junior varsity tournament gets underway this week with first round action starting Monday night and concluding with the finals Saturday night.

There will be 13 games Tuesday night. Wednesday night the Senath-Hornersville Invitational tournament begins and concludes Saturday night. Thursday night there are two boys games scheduled and one girl's game on tap. Friday night there are 13 games scheduled in the area.

Most coaches are now looking forward to the conference games and also the conference tournaments which will commence in the last half of the month. The Dunklin and Bootheel conference tourneys are scheduled for February. The Poplar Bluff invitational tourney will be in January.

Tuesday's schedule will find Kennett at Malden. The Indians won the Bloomfield Christmas tournament behind Robert Roundtree. Malden has the potential to defeat the Indians but must get a concentrated effort from all five starters. Six-five Robert Blackman can rebound with the Indian and is a good inside threat offensively but the rest of the Greenwave players must work with him if he is going to be effective. Malden looked very good in their losing effort against the Sikeston Bulldogs in the BHS tournament.

Clarkton visits Campbell with their race horse offense. The Reindeer have good shooters so the Camels will have to be at their best defensively.

Chaffee will be at Jackson. Jackson has some good talent but hasn't as yet put anything together for a winning combination. Chaffee was without the services of their outstanding guard, Lindy Duncan but he may be back in the lineup for this one. Lindy suffered a dislocated elbow before the University High School Christmas and hasn't played since.

The East Prairie Eagles go next door to take on the Charleston Bluejays. Charleston won the UHS Christmas tournament and has improved some since their loss to Meridian and Cairo. The Eagles are a much slower team than Charleston and will probably have considerable trouble against the Bluejay zone press.

South Pemiscot travels to Cooter for a Bootheel conference game. Cooter has been playing the best basketball of the schools history. South Pemiscot is capable of scoring points also.

University High is at Illmo-Scott City. The Preps have the best team in the history of the school. The Rams have an offense geared around Steve Hanschen. Neither team has much height to compete with the better teams in the area.

New Madrid visits Dexter. The Bearcats have too much height for the Indians. New Madrid plays good defense but aren't tall enough to rebound well against Dexter.

Richland plays at Bell City in a Stoddard county game. The Rebels' offensive is built around Jim Clay and Sylvester Patterson. Both boys are good shooters. Bell City has a balanced scoring attack with at least three starters capable of scoring in double figures. Neither team has an outstanding big man for rebounding.

The Kelly Hawks travel to Bloomfield. Kelly will get a chance to see if they can play with the Wildcats in preparation for the class 2A regional tournament in Bloomfield this March. The Hawks are hoping to jell by the time the regional rolls around. Bloomfield hasn't found the unbeatable combination as yet.

Poplar Bluff will be at Caruthersville. The Tigers can be plenty tough in their home gym. The Mules don't have much offensive power and are a little short on height.

Greenville comes over to Woodland. Woodland gives 110 percent in each game but lacks the big boys to be a big winner. Greenville doesn't have the material to be a winner either.

Gideon has the dubious honor of traveling to Lilbourn for a New Madrid county game. The Panthers have improved their hustle since the beginning of the season. Gideon is just too small for the big bad Panthers.

Panel's Picks

After a lengthy layoff because of tournaments and light scheduling, the Daily Standard sports staff is returning to the task of predicting just who will win tonight's high school basketball games.

The panel disagrees on just five of the 13 games on the schedule. Charlie Francis was the only staff member to pick South Pemiscot to knock off Cooter, while Dale Forbis maintains that University High will beat Illmo-Scott City. Bill Harrison went out on his own on three of the picks, choosing Bell City over Richland, Caruthersville over Poplar Bluff and Holcomb over Greenway, Arkansas. Maybe Bill knows something Dale and Charlie don't.

Three Cards named to NFL all-pro first team

NEW YORK (AP) — Record-shattering quarterback Fran Tarkenton of the Minnesota Vikings heads the National Football League All-Pro team selected by The Associated Press and announced today.

Joining Tarkenton in the All-Pro backfield are runners Chuck Foreman of Minnesota and O.J. Simpson of Buffalo. Speedy Cliff Branch of Oakland and Mel Gray of St. Louis are the wide receivers with Denver's Riley Odoms chosen at tight end.

Mel Blount of Pittsburgh and Roger Wehrli of St. Louis are the cornerbacks with Minnesota's Paul Krause at free safety and Ken Houston of Washington at strong safety.

Tarkenton enjoyed a brilliant season, directing the Vikings to their seventh NFC Central division title in the last eight years. The veteran quarterback shattered three of Johnny Unitas' career passing records, setting new marks for attempts (5,225), completions (2,931) and touchdowns (291). The Minnesota quarterback led all NFC passers, completing 64.2 per cent of his attempts and hurling 25 touchdown passes.

His favorite target was Foreman, who led the NFL with 73 catches, the most ever for a running back. Foreman also led the conference with 22 touchdowns and rushed for a club record 1,070 yards.

Simpson rushed for a league-leading 1,817 yards and set a single season record with 23 touchdowns, one more than Gale Sayers had for the Chicago Bears in 1965.

Branch caught 51 passes for 893 yards and nine touchdowns for the AFC West champion Raiders. Gray grabbed 48 for 926 yards and 11 TDs for the Cardinals, champions of the NFC East. Odoms had 40 catches for 540 yards for Denver.

Bakken connected on 19 of 24 attempted field goals and scored 97 points.

On defense, Blount and Krause led their respective conferences in interceptions. Blount picked off 11 passes, returning them for 121 yards. Krause had 10 interceptions and 201 yards in returns.

Krause and Page anchored a Minnesota defense that led the league. Pittsburgh was second in the AFC on a defense constructed largely around Ham and Greenwood, whose play helped overcome the loss of Joe Greene, out for five games because of a pinched nerve in his neck.

Bicentennial gives boost to nation's travel market

By NICK TATRO
Associated Press Writer

The Bicentennial will give an extra boost to the travel market in 1976 and there is evidence of a boom already in the nation's capital and in New England, an Associated Press sampling shows.

Suprisingly, the increased travel to historic sites in the United States is not expected to hurt overseas touring or traditional domestic spas such as Hawaii and Florida, according to an AP check of travel agents, tour organizers, airlines, resort officials and trade publications in some 25 cities at home and abroad.

"We anticipate a good domestic travel year, the best ever in the area of touring," said Alan Fredericks, editor of Travel Weekly, an industry publication that keeps tabs on organized travel.

He said airlines predicted a 6 per cent increase in travel domestically and that a "suprising number will travel overseas."

"Bicentennial will undoubtedly stimulate improvement," he said.

How much of a boost is hard to predict because many will wait until the last possible moment and travel by car to an area near home.

"Bicentennial travel will prove not to be just a fluke. Historical settings are popular for 1976 because most groups plan one trip a year and are going to these spots," said John Stachnik of Forlow Tours in Chicago. "This is bound to have an effect on other areas but not as much as it might seem. People are just on the go more than ever...."

Stachnik said he had booked 9,000 students to Williamsburg, Va., and Washington this spring, three times the number last year. He said adult bookings were up 20 per cent.

Lynn Hilton of Debby and Hilton Travel Services in Salt Lake City, specializing in student tours, said he hired five 707s and DC8s in 1975 and has 11 under charter for this spring with plans to order 14 more.

Hilton said his tours are one week long to Williamsburg, Va., Washington, Philadelphia and New York. He said he expects 1976 bookings to be 10 times the number of last year's.

"We are getting indications of interest in Bicentennial-type trips," said Jim Phillips of Commercial National Travel Service in Little Rock, Ark. "I believe Bicentennial is going to be pretty big, but I believe it will be more individuals getting in the family car and taking a trip."

Carolyn Smithee of Osborne Travel Agency in Atlanta said there has been no decline in European travel but there has been "about a 15 per cent increase" in travel to historic spots "and it's going to get higher than that."

She said booking was very difficult for the popular Bicentennial areas and "right now Williamsburg is the most popular."

Many travel agents said they expected Bicentennial bookings to take off about March or April but it was too early to predict the number.

For Boston, Williamsburg, Philadelphia and Washington, the boom has already begun.

United Airlines plans a special "Freedom Fare" beginning Feb. 1 that will cut fares up to 30 per cent for those making reservations at least two weeks in advance. Other discounts, including new one-trip charters, were cited as a cause for a rise in travel.

Rules given to prepare for year's coldest month

Libla suggested some rules to help families prepare for winter storms. "Become independent," he says. Check battery powered equipment, heating fuel and other supplies. Dressing for the weather will make you more comfortable and also cut down on chances for problems due to exposure.

Libla says layers of protective clothing are more effective and efficient than single layers of thick clothing. Mittens are warmer than gloves and you'll be more comfortable in long underwear," he added.

"In cold weather," he said, "40 per cent of the body's heat will be lost through a bare head. Therefore it is important to wear a hat. This will make it easier to keep the entire body warm"

Don't kill yourself shoveling snow, Libla warned. It is extremely hard work and can bring on a heart attack, a major cause of death during and after winter storms.

The family should make provisions for emergency heating of the home in case electricity fails, causing furnaces to become inoperative. Libla also said care should be exercised with portable oil or gas space heaters. They give off carbon monoxide gas which can kill quickly, without warning.

"A little care and preparation," Libla says "can make the winter safer, more comfortable and more pleasant for everybody."

Bicentennial gives boost to nation's travel market

By NICK TATRO
Associated Press Writer

The Bicentennial will give an extra boost to the travel market in 1976 and there is evidence of a boom already in the nation's capital and in New England, an Associated Press sampling shows.

Suprisingly, the increased travel to historic sites in the United States is not expected to hurt overseas touring or traditional domestic spas such as Hawaii and Florida, according to an AP check of travel agents, tour organizers, airlines, resort officials and trade publications in some 25 cities at home and abroad.

"We anticipate a good domestic travel year, the best ever in the area of touring," said Alan Fredericks, editor of Travel Weekly, an industry publication that keeps tabs on organized travel.

He said airlines predicted a 6 per cent increase in travel domestically and that a "suprising number will travel overseas."

"Bicentennial will undoubtedly stimulate improvement," he said.

How much of a boost is hard to predict because many will wait until the last possible moment and travel by car to an area near home.

"Bicentennial travel will prove not to be just a fluke. Historical settings are popular for 1976 because most groups plan one trip a year and are going to these spots," said John Stachnik of Forlow Tours in Chicago. "This is bound to have an effect on other areas but not as much as it might seem. People are just on the go more than ever...."

Stachnik said he had booked 9,000 students to Williamsburg, Va., and Washington this spring, three times the number last year. He said adult bookings were up 20 per cent.

Lynn Hilton of Debby and Hilton Travel Services in Salt Lake City, specializing in student tours, said he hired five 707s and DC8s in 1975 and has 11 under charter for this spring with plans to order 14 more.

Hilton said his tours are one week long to Williamsburg, Va., Washington, Philadelphia and New York. He said he expects 1976 bookings to be 10 times the number of last year's.

"We are getting indications of interest in Bicentennial-type trips," said Jim Phillips of Commercial National Travel Service in Little Rock, Ark. "I believe Bicentennial is going to be pretty big, but I believe it will be more individuals getting in the family car and taking a trip."

Carolyn Smithee of Osborne Travel Agency in Atlanta said there has been no decline in European travel but there has been "about a 15 per cent increase" in travel to historic spots "and it's going to get higher than that."

She said booking was very difficult for the popular Bicentennial areas and "right now Williamsburg is the most popular."

Many travel agents said they expected Bicentennial bookings to take off about March or April but it was too early to predict the number.

For Boston, Williamsburg, Philadelphia and Washington, the boom has already begun.

United Airlines plans a special "Freedom Fare" beginning Feb. 1 that will cut fares up to 30 per cent for those making reservations at least two weeks in advance. Other discounts, including new one-trip charters, were cited as a cause for a rise in travel.

Libla suggested some rules to help families prepare for winter storms. "Become independent," he says. Check battery powered equipment, heating fuel and other supplies. Dressing for the weather will make you more comfortable and also cut down on chances for problems due to exposure.

Libla says layers of protective clothing are more effective and efficient than single layers of thick clothing. Mittens are warmer than gloves and you'll be more comfortable in long underwear," he added.

"In cold weather," he said, "40 per cent of the body's heat will be lost through a bare head. Therefore it is important to wear a hat. This will make it easier to keep the entire body warm"

Don't kill yourself shoveling snow, Libla warned. It is extremely hard work and can bring on a heart attack, a major cause of death during and after winter storms.

The family should make provisions for emergency heating of the home in case electricity fails, causing furnaces to become inoperative. Libla also said care should be exercised with portable oil or gas space heaters. They give off carbon monoxide gas which can kill quickly, without warning.

"A little care and preparation," Libla says "can make the winter safer, more comfortable and more pleasant for everybody."

Want a date? Just call

BALTIMORE (AP) — Want a date? Try calling Baltimore's on-the-air dating service.

WFBR radio's evening announcer, "Commander" Jim Morton, takes calls between top-40 and oldie records.

Callers seeking dates range in age from 18 up. Some are young people, many are separated or divorced, or elderly persons who say they have difficulty meeting people.

Crank calls are infrequent and — unlike many talk shows — callers usually stick to the matter at hand.

Surrounded by banks of cartridge tapes, coils and tangles of cables, and a control desk covered with telephones, instrument panels and turntables, Morton takes the first calls just after he goes on the air at 7 p.m.

The affable, bearded Washington, D.C., native jokes with a teen-ager called "Chopper" who just wanted to get on the air "to show my friends" and a Libra who wants to talk to Tom — whose girlfriend died.

Pushing his mop of brown hair out of his eyes, he puts off a man who wants his "case" to be the first heard. The "Commander" wants a woman's "case" to be the first.

A 27-year-old junior high school physical education teacher calls; she wants to date a sensitive man. A sports writer from an afternoon newspaper calls and — although she admits she doesn't read the sports section too often — they're interested in each other.

When they continue their conversation off the air, it's up to her to decide whether to give him her telephone number.

Morton plays another record and resumes screening calls. A few regulars are told to call back later. Those under 18 are rejected and a caller with someone yelling in the background is cut off.

The next "case" is Bob, a 6-foot-7, 220-pound student at the University of Maryland's Baltimore County campus. Often grinning, eyes sparkling, Morton kids him, easing the tension.

Bob says tall people are seldom appreciated. He wants a tall blonde, 18-to 19-years-old. "One that can talk; I don't like plastic people," he says.

The second caller is a 5-foot-6 premed student who lives in the dormitory next to Bob's. She says she's been admiring him for a semester and will even wear a red arm band so he'll recognize her.

They're both excited and she slips, giving her phone number on the air. They hang up to call each other after Bob promises to call back to the station later to report on how the meeting goes.

The calls and records alternate as the evening rolls on to 10 p.m., when a recorded radio drama is presented. Tonight many of the callers are tall people, their confidence bolstered by the first callers.

On other nights, it may be law students, medical students or another group that takes center stage.

Morton, who's been with the locally-owned station for almost five years, had been experimenting with what he calls "singles radio" for several months when he decided in July to try the dating service for one night.

The telephones lit up and the calls are still coming in.

After Thomas Jefferson's retirement to Monticello in 1809, he developed his interest in education, founding the University of Virginia and watching its development with never-flagging interest.

Beer belly needs trim

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In reference to your column on weight control I would like to know what is best to reduce the size of my stomach. I am 5 feet 9 and weigh 180 pounds. The extra weight is in my stomach.

I enjoy my beer, and because of beer or over eating at times my stomach bloats and I have to take a vegetable compound to keep my bowels regular.

I have a herniated disc and I am limited in work and activities. I do not prefer surgery and was sent to a rehabilitation center for physical therapy to strengthen my back muscles. I have attended for seven months and I feel fairly good most of the time but when gas in the stomach builds up it puts pressure on my back and I am just barely able to get around. Any advice would be appreciated.

DEAR READER — You won't like the advice. Stop the beer. The way to get rid of a beer belly is to get rid of the beer. You really can't be successful in reducing the waistline if you have a lot of fat in the abdomen and around the abdomen. You just can't compress fat into something smaller. That is why exercises, as valuable as they are, can do so little for a truly fat abdomen unless you reduce.

If you are successful in getting the excess fat out of and off your torso, then exercises that strengthen your abdominal muscles will help shrink your waistline. Some of these exercises to strengthen your abdomen will also give your back support. You should be able to get help with these from the physical therapy department where you are now receiving treatment.

People who have back problems should not begin exercise programs without the approval of the type of exercise by their physician. Those who want more information on how to reduce the abdomen can send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know how dangerous smoking a pipe is to your health. Recently I started smoking one. I know the hazards of cigarette smoking but not that of a pipe. I do not inhale very much.

DEAR READER — Studies in the United States have not linked pipe smoking to heart disease or some other ills of tobacco. But Sweden's famed Karolinska Institute in Stockholm studied the problem and found a higher rate of heart attacks in pipe smokers than in non-smokers.

The differences in observations in the United States and Sweden are probably related to the difficulty in finding a population of pipe smokers to study over a period of time in the United States.

The case of the searching hand

By: JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Sarah sent Wilber a letter in which she admitted that she owed him $750. But, getting money from Sarah -- which Wilber tried to do over a period of several months -- was like trying to take cubs away from a lioness. In fact, when Wilber finally confronted Sarah with the letter and demanded payment, not only didn't he get paid, he lost the letter as well. Sarah snatched it right out of his hand and quickly deposited it down her bosom for safekeeping.

Determined to get the letter back, Wilber grabbed Sarah by the arm and sticking his hand down her blouse groped around for it. Where he groped, however, he didn't find the letter -- only trouble. Sarah sued him for attacking her.

"He had no right to put his hand down my bosom," she complained in court. "What's more, he wasn't even gentle about it and I've got bruises to prove it."

"She's not entitled to a penny," protested Wilber in turn. "She took my letter. And, the fact that I didn't get it back was proof that I wasn't unduly rough in searching for it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Wilber pay for puttering around in Sarah's blouse?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that while Wilber had a right to try and recover his property, he did not have the right to use excessive force in doing so and excessive force was indicated by Sarah's bruises. What's more, concluded the judge, the fact that Wilber failed to retrieve the letter was no proof that excesive force had not been used since his failure could have been due to a variety of other causes encountered while searching around in Sarah's blouse.

'I still cry when I sing it'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "I cried the first time I heard it," Kenny Starr says. "And I see tears every time I sing it."

He was referring to "The Blind Man in the Bleachers," his hit country single about a blind man who dies before he gets to see his son star on the football field.

"It's a good ol' hometown, all-American song," said Starr, 22, who's been performing with the Loretta Lynn road show for four years.

"When I first heard it, I cried," he said. "I didn't bawl or anything like that, but tears started coming down my cheeks.

"On the show, I usually do it last. I can see the first two or three rows, and when I hit that last note, I can see the tears."

The last note refers to the father getting to see his son play for the first time — after he dies.

Starr said the song, written by Sterling Whipple and recorded for the pop charts by David Geddes, appeals to all ages.

"When I do a show, people have said to me, 'My husband is a coach, and he sure likes that song,' or "My son plays football and he loves it.'

"I think people who hear it relate to it — to someone they know or to something that has happened.

"People are listening to words more. Story songs are doing well right now. When I recorded it, I thought that if people would listen to the words, it would be a hit.

"I kind of put myself in that kid's place; I never was real good in sports."

Starr, whose father is alive, had recorded four previous singles — none of them hits. His record company was on the verge of dropping him when "Blind Man in the Bleachers" came along.

"It was the greatest Christmas present I ever had," said Starr, who grew up in Burlingame, Kan.

"I still cry when I sing it."

'I still cry when I sing it'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "I cried the first time I heard it," Kenny Starr says. "And I see tears every time I sing it."

He was referring to "The Blind Man in the Bleachers," his hit country single about a blind man who dies before he gets to see his son star on the football field.

"It's a good ol' hometown, all-American song," said Starr, 22, who's been performing with the Loretta Lynn road show for four years.

"When I first heard it, I cried," he said. "I didn't bawl or anything like that, but tears started coming down my cheeks.

"On the show, I usually do it last. I can see the first two or three rows, and when I hit that last note, I can see the tears."

The last note refers to the father getting to see his son play for the first time — after he dies.

Starr said the song, written by Sterling Whipple and recorded for the pop charts by David Geddes, appeals to all ages.

"When I do a show, people have said to me, 'My husband is a coach, and he sure likes that song,' or "My son plays football and he loves it.'

"I think people who hear it relate to it — to someone they know or to something that has happened.

"People are listening to words more. Story songs are doing well right now. When I recorded it, I thought that if people would listen to the words, it would be a hit.

"I kind of put myself in that kid's place; I never was real good in sports."

Starr, whose father is alive, had recorded four previous singles — none of them hits. His record company was on the verge of dropping him when "Blind Man in the Bleachers" came along.

"It was the greatest Christmas present I ever had," said Starr, who grew up in Burlingame, Kan.

"I still cry when I sing it."

One-man art exhibit opens Jan. 13 at SeMo

CAPE GIRARDEAU—A one-man exhibit of prints and drawings by Grand Lund will be opened to the public Jan. 13, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Student Center Gallery on the Southeast Missouri State University campus.

With the opening of the exhibit will be the opportunity of seeing most of the plates from which the prints were taken. For the opening night, Dr. Lund of the Southeast Missouri State University Art Department will have the prints placed above the plates from which they were taken. The show will remain on display during the month of January, but the plates will only be available for viewing on opening night.

The exhibit will include etching, woodcut, wood engraving, silk screen, lithograph, and collagraph plus a variety of drawings.

Dr. Lund has stated that the nature of prints are not well understood in this section of the country because of the limited number of people working with printmaking techniques. Sometimes artists and gallery owners take advantage of this for their own profit and present photographically reproduced art work which they have signed in imitation of original fine art prints.

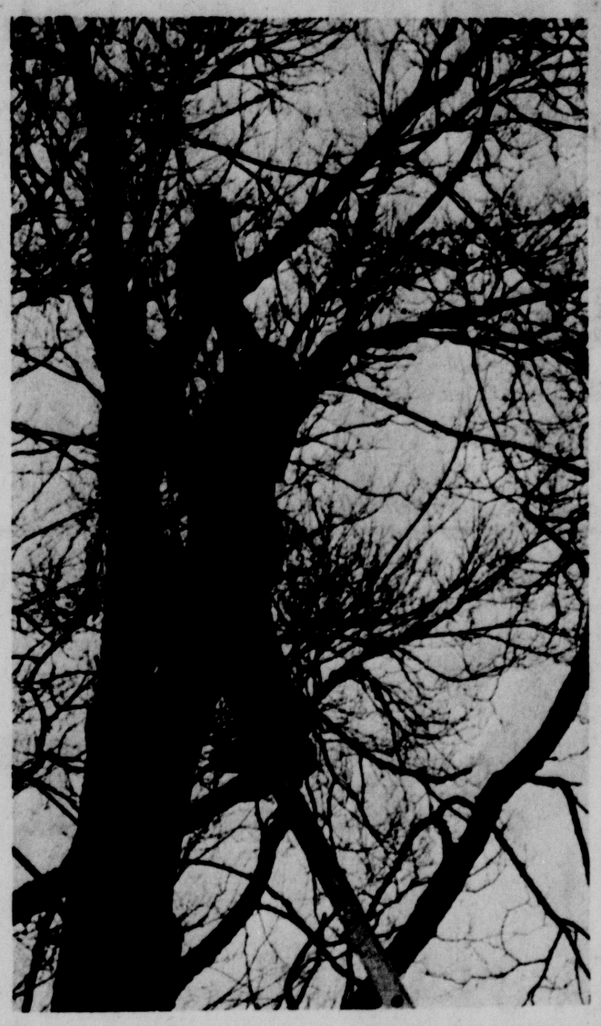

The major difference between the two processes is that with the fine art original print the artist works directly on the plate while the imitation is mechanically reproduced. The mechanical copy is often then presented as equal value as the print made directly by the artist.

According to the standards set by the Print Council of America this is unethical. The opening night of the exhibit will allow the viewer to handle the plates and become familiar with the various fine art printmaking processes.

The artist, who is well known for his unusually large woodcuts, will be available for questions and discussion of both the technique and content of the prints and drawings. A brochure explaining the nature of printmaking and its various possibilities will be available with the show.

In the brochure, Dr. Lund states that his first love in studio art is printmaking. He has taught the subject at Brigham Young University, New Mexico Junior College, and at Pennsylvania State University. He holds a Master's of Fine Arts Degree from Brigham Young University in printmaking as well as an Education Doctorate from Pennsylvania State University.

Cat in the tree caper

Flag ceremony slated

SCOTT CITY–A flag-raising ceremony will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday by Wetterau Foods, Inc., in recognition of the nation's Bicenntennial celebration this year.

The Scott City division of Wetterau will fly the 48 different flags used during the nation's history as a token of recognition for its 200th birthday.

Ceremonies will be held on the company parking lot and will include an address by vice president-general manager Leonard Waldron on the free enterprise heritage of the country.

Plans include a flag-raising by members of the Missouri National Guard Unit from Cape Girardeau which will be dressed in Colonial-style uniforms.

Column combats loneliness

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — Widow Dorothy Fletcher has set up an organization to help combat what she says is "one disease we can cure" — loneliness.

The mother of seven children and founder of "Loneliness Anonymous" puts out a monthly newsletter to help single people find each other. She advertises for lonely people in the personal column of a local newspaper and then, for $10, places a brief description of any respondents in her newsletter. No names are mentioned, but a newsletter subscriber can obtain the telephone number and first name of the person described from Mrs. Fletcher.

"I've got a 70-year-old man and a 68-year-old woman going out to dinner and having the time of their lives," Mrs. Fletcher says.

In the brochure, Dr. Lund states that his first love in studio art is printmaking. He has taught the subject at Brigham Young University, New Mexico Junior College, and at Pennsylvania State University. He holds a Master's of Fine Arts Degree from Brigham Young University in printmaking as well as an Education Doctorate from Pennsylvania State University.

Flag ceremony slated

SCOTT CITY–A flag-raising ceremony will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday by Wetterau Foods, Inc., in recognition of the nation's Bicenntennial celebration this year.

The Scott City division of Wetterau will fly the 48 different flags used during the nation's history as a token of recognition for its 200th birthday.

Ceremonies will be held on the company parking lot and will include an address by vice president-general manager Leonard Waldron on the free enterprise heritage of the country.

Plans include a flag-raising by members of the Missouri National Guard Unit from Cape Girardeau which will be dressed in Colonial-style uniforms.

Column combats loneliness

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — Widow Dorothy Fletcher has set up an organization to help combat what she says is "one disease we can cure" — loneliness.

The mother of seven children and founder of "Loneliness Anonymous" puts out a monthly newsletter to help single people find each other. She advertises for lonely people in the personal column of a local newspaper and then, for $10, places a brief description of any respondents in her newsletter. No names are mentioned, but a newsletter subscriber can obtain the telephone number and first name of the person described from Mrs. Fletcher.

"I've got a 70-year-old man and a 68-year-old woman going out to dinner and having the time of their lives," Mrs. Fletcher says.

Top French Woman Auto Racer Wonders why no U.S. Competition

By TIM WHITE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Marie-Claude Beaumont, international known French automobile racer, has a simple, smiling reply for those who express skeptical bemusement when they see a woman behind the wheel of a professional racing machine.

MARIE-CLAUDE BEAUMONT

"Auto racing is a matter of mathematics — timing," says the blonde Miss Beaumont. "Sex has nothing to do with winning a race.

"You see," she points out wryly, "the timekeeper's clock ticks at the same speed for a man or a woman."

In the 10 years she has been active in professional European rally and circuit racing, the sport's nonpartisan timepieces have repeatedly been kind to her.

Marie-Claude's recent successes include being top woman finisher at Monte Carlo in 1974 and 1975 and a victory this year in the 2-litre competition at Monza, Italy, an honor she shared with Italian teammate Lella Lombardi, codriver of their Renault Alpine.

From the beginning, the attractive and brainy Miss Beaumont seemed a natural as a driver. Descended from two generations of male French automobile dealers, she entered her first rally in 1965 when she won the women's division of the Criteriun des Cevennes and that same year captured the Coupe des Dames. In 1966, she finished first in the women's division of both the Alpine Cup and the Corsican Tour and has been turning in one stunning performance after another ever since. Indeed, she was named French Woman Rally Champion in both 1969 and 1970.

One would never guess that auto racing was a regretful second choice.

"When I was a young girl growing up in Grenoble, France," she explains, "I made up my mind that I wanted to be a championship skier. Grenoble is a sports-minded place and I have always been active in all kinds of sports, even teaching a few, like ice skating.

"But skiing was my favorite. I liked the speed and the balance it demands, but unfortunately I was not good enough to reach the top. If I had begun practicing as a little girl I might have excelled, but I did not and am sorry.

"Skiing was my first love, and I guess that auto racing is a replacement for it, but it's something I got involved in on my own. I come from a large family and neither my father nor my mother encouraged me to drive. In fact, I never even asked their opinion."

In 1953, Marie-Claude, then 12, was introduced to British racing great Stirling Moss and his sister, Pat, a rally driver. The encounter had a lasting impression on the energetic, fiercely independent girl and in later years she and Pat met again professionally and became close friends.

Miss Beaumont says there is much respect and good fellowship among the world's drivers, both male and female. She also asserts that any initial sexual prejudice against women drivers in the male-dominated sport usually stems from pragmatical concerns.

"I had a lot of problems when I began competing against men," she recalls, "but they came mostly from their worrying whether they could trust me as a driver. They wondered why I had taken up the sport. Was it because I wanted more color and fun in my life? Was it because I wanted to be around a lot of men, or make some sort of political point? Or was it because I was a serious driver, committed to being the best that I could be?

"Auto racing is dangerous," she continues. "Drivers must be able to trust each other to behave responsibly before the competition begins. Now the men trust me — they see this is my life."

Miss Beaumont says, "When I was younger, I felt I had to prove everything to everybody. I did a lot of things just to get some sort of reaction from people. I know I was wrong. What I do now, I do for myself, to please myself.

"I am committed to racing, to learning as much as I can about all its aspects. I have a team of mechanics who work on my cars, but my job is to know the machinery and be diagnostic. I can't stop in the pit during the race and say to the crew, 'There's a funny noise somewhere. I wonder what it is?' "

Miss Beaumont's most recent visit to the States was to give a driving demonstration of a new car. When she returns in 1976 it will be to compete along with teammate Lella Lombardi.

"We will probably drive in such events as the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins Glen and Road America, but it will be for the right reasons," she emphasizes, "not for photographers.

"I am also very curious why there are no American women on top in rally and track racing," she confesses. "For instance, there are American girls that are top champions in tennis and golf. I know there is at least one good American women drag racer, Shirley Muldowney, but that's very different from what I do."

Though in her 30s, Marie-Claude feels she has a long career of successful driving ahead of her. She admits, however, that she is "closer to the end than I am to the beginning," and when she gives an example of an athlete who retired with grace and dignity, she chooses a male rather a female. Ironically, he is a skier.

"When I think of someone who bowed out in the best way," she says, "I think of Jean-Claude Killy. He was such a great athlete and always will be known that way, because he left when he was at his peak. He didn't keep competing until he embarrassed his own accomplishments.

"For me, there are so many cars yet to drive; I am still making much progress. But I hope I will know the day when I'm taking risks I can't afford. I also wish to retire with dignity."

Stamps In The News

The first U.S. commemorative issue of 1976 will be a strip of three connected 13-cent stamps with the theme "Spirit of '76." The trio of stamps will be placed on sale Jan. 1 in Pasadena, Calif., during the Tournament of Roses Parade.

The design is based on the famous painting by Archibald M. Willard depicting the legendary Revolutionary War fife and drum marchers. The three stamps form a design entity but can be used separately for postage. Willard painted his historic piece in 1875 and it was displayed at the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia. It now hangs in Abbot Hall, Marblehead, Mass.

There will be no formal first day of issue ceremony. Instead the stamps will be placed on sale Jan. 1 at several locations along the route of the Tournament of Roses parade, as well as the main post office in Pasadena.

Across the top of each stamp appears "USA 13c"and across the bottom in script is the wording "Spirit of '76."

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send their requests to: "Spirit of '76 Stamps,Postmaster, Pasadena, Calif. 91109." The cost is 13 cents per stamp (39 cents for the three) which should be sent in money orders, not cash, together with the self-addressed envelope.

Each envelope should have the return address written low and to the left to accommodate the three-stamp set. Orders must be postmarked by Jan. 1, 1976.

Australia's 15-cent Christmas stamp shows the Three Wise Men approaching Mary and the crib. This is for domestic mail. The overseas airmail Christmas stamp with a 45-cent rate illustrates a star radiating rays of light and is a visual interpretation of the biblical text "And the Light Shineth in Darkness."

The last of the 1975-76 catalogs of interest to the general collector is the Minkus New World Wide Stamp Catalog, Volume I. It covers the U.S., its territories and possessions, United Nations, British Commonwealth of Nations, Ireland, Central and South America and the Free States of Africa and Asia.

The big market jump noted in this volume is for the British Commonwealth up through and including the 1960s. Other nations made advances in their values but not as much as the British sector.

The catalog contains 2,200 pages, over 100,000 updated entries, 26,000 illustrations and 50,000 essential price changes. The hard bound volume sells for $16.50 at your local dealer or stamp department.

A "Penny Mulready" bearing a Penny Black stamp mailed on the first day of adhesive postage stamp issuance — May 6, 1840 — was purchased this month for $4,630 at a Stanley Gibbons auction in London. The buyer was a New York philatelist who had been searching for this rarity many years and is placing his stamp item on display at Barclays Bank in New York.

The Penny Mulready, named after Irish artist William Mulready who designed the special envelope, was intended as a method of prepaid postage under Rowland Hill's Uniform Penny Post scheme. They were introduced with the world's first postage stamps on May 6, 1840, but the public did not take to the designed envelope and they were withdrawn in 1841, thus making the Mulreadys with the Penny Black and the Two Pence Blue a rarity in stampdom.

Many persons have written asking about Christmas Seals as part of a collection.

Well, although the Christmas Seal is not a postage stamp, it is used so often on letters and packages that thousands of hobbyists keep a separate section for such stamps and Scott's U.S. Stamp Catalog, Specialized, devotes several pages with illustrations to the seals.

Einar Holboell, an employe of the Danish Post Office, is credited with having created the Christmas Seal. It was his idea that money could be raised for charitable purposes by the sale of such stamps — and the post offices of Denmark, Iceland and Sweden began to sell them during the Christmas season of 1904.

Top French Woman Auto Racer Wonders why no U.S. Competition

By TIM WHITE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Marie-Claude Beaumont, internationally known French automobile racer, has a simple, smiling reply for those who express skeptical bemusement when they see a woman behind the wheel of a professional racing machine.

MARIE-CLAUDE BEAUMONT

"Auto racing is a matter of mathematics — timing," says the blonde Miss Beaumont. "Sex has nothing to do with winning a race.

"You see," she points out wryly, "the timekeeper's clock ticks at the same speed for a man or a woman."

In the 10 years she has been active in professional European rally and circuit racing, the sport's nonpartisan timepieces have repeatedly been kind to her.

Marie-Claude's recent successes include being top woman finisher at Monte Carlo in 1974 and 1975 and a victory this year in the 2-litre competition at Monza, Italy, an honor she shared with Italian teammate Lella Lombardi, codriver of their Renault Alpine.

From the beginning, the attractive and brainy Miss Beaumont seemed a natural as a driver. Descended from two generations of male French automobile dealers, she entered her first rally in 1965 when she won the women's division of the Criteriun des Cevennes and that same year captured the Coupe des Dames. In 1966, she finished first in the women's division of both the Alpine Cup and the Corsican Tour and has been turning in one stunning performance after another ever since. Indeed, she was named French Woman Rally Champion in both 1969 and 1970.

One would never guess that auto racing was a regretful second choice.

"When I was a young girl growing up in Grenoble, France," she explains, "I made up my mind that I wanted to be a championship skier. Grenoble is a sports-minded place and I have always been active in all kinds of sports, even teaching a few, like ice skating.

"But skiing was my favorite. I liked the speed and the balance it demands, but unfortunately I was not good enough to reach the top. I believe I started too late. If I had begun practicing as a little girl I might have excelled, but I did not and am sorry.

"Skiing was my first love, and I guess that auto racing is a replacement for it, but it's something I got involved in on my own. I come from a large family and neither my father nor my mother encouraged me to drive. In fact, I never even asked their opinion."

In 1953, Marie-Claude, then 12, was introduced to British racing great Stirling Moss and his sister, Pat, a rally driver. The encounter had a lasting impression on the energetic, fiercely independent girl and in later years she and Pat met again professionally and became close friends.

Miss Beaumont says there is much respect and good fellowship among the world's drivers, both male and female. She also asserts that any initial sexual prejudice against women drivers in the male-dominated sport usually stems from pragmatical concerns.

"I had a lot of problems when I began competing against men," she recalls, "but they came mostly from their worrying whether they could trust me as a driver. They wondered why I had taken up the sport. Was it because I wanted more color and fun in my life? Was it because I wanted to be around a lot of men, or make some sort of political point? Or was it because I was a serious driver, committed to being the best that I could be?

"Auto racing is dangerous," she continues. "Drivers must be able to trust each other to behave responsibly before the competition begins. Now the men trust me — they see this is my life."

Miss Beaumont says, "When I was younger, I felt I had to prove everything to everybody. I did a lot of things just to get some sort of reaction from people. I know I was wrong. What I do now, I do for myself, to please myself.

"I am committed to racing, to learning as much as I can about all its aspects. I have a team of mechanics who work on my cars, but my job is to know the machinery and be diagnostic. I can't stop in the pit during the race and say to the crew, 'There's a funny noise somewhere. I wonder what it is?' "

Miss Beaumont's most recent visit to the States was to give a driving demonstration of a new car. When she returns in 1976 it will be to compete along with teammate Lella Lombardi.

"We will probably drive in such events as the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins Glen and Road America, but it will be for the right reasons," she emphasizes, "not for photographers.

"I am also very curious why there are no American women on top in rally and track racing," she confesses. "For instance, there are American girls that are top champions in tennis and golf. I know there is at least one good American women drag racer, Shirley Muldowney, but that's very different from what I do."

Though in her 30s, Marie-Claude feels she has a long career of successful driving ahead of her. She admits, however, that she is "closer to the end than I am to the beginning," and when she gives an example of an athlete who retired with grace and dignity, she chooses a male rather a female. Ironically, he is a skier.

"When I think of someone who bowed out in the best way," she says, "I think of Jean-Claude Killy. He was such a great athlete and always will be known that way, because he left when he was at his peak. He didn't keep competing until he embarrassed his own accomplishments.

"For me, there are so many cars yet to drive; I am still making much progress. But I hope I will know the day when I'm taking risks I can't afford. I also wish to retire with dignity."

Stamps In The News

The first U.S. commemorative issue of 1976 will be a strip of three connected 13-cent stamps with the theme "Spirit of '76." The trio of stamps will be placed on sale Jan. 1 in Pasadena, Calif., during the Tournament of Roses Parade.

The design is based on the famous painting by Archibald M. Willard depicting the legendary Revolutionary War fife and drum marchers. The three stamps form a design entity but can be used separately for postage. Willard painted his historic piece in 1875 and it was displayed at the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia. It now hangs in Abbot Hall, Marblehead, Mass.

There will be no formal first day of issue ceremony. Instead the stamps will be placed on sale Jan. 1 at several locations along the route of the Tournament of Roses parade, as well as the main post office in Pasadena.

Across the top of each stamp appears "USA 13c"and across the bottom in script is the wording "Spirit of '76."

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations should send their requests to: "Spirit of '76 Stamps,Postmaster, Pasadena, Calif. 91109." The cost is 13 cents per stamp (39 cents for the three) which should be sent in money orders, not cash, together with the self-addressed envelope.

Each envelope should have the return address written low and to the left to accommodate the three-stamp set. Orders must be postmarked by Jan. 1, 1976.

Australia's 15-cent Christmas stamp shows the Three Wise Men approaching Mary and the crib. This is for domestic mail. The overseas airmail Christmas stamp with a 45-cent rate illustrates a star radiating rays of light and is a visual interpretation of the biblical text "And the Light Shineth in Darkness."

The last of the 1975-76 catalogs of interest to the general collector is the Minkus New World Wide Stamp Catalog, Volume I. It covers the U.S., its territories and possessions, United Nations, British Commonwealth of Nations, Ireland, Central and South America and the Free States of Africa and Asia.

The big market jump noted in this volume is for the British Commonwealth up through and including the 1960s. Other nations made advances in their values but not as much as the British sector.

The catalog contains 2,200 pages, over 100,000 updated entries, 26,000 illustrations and 50,000 essential price changes. The hard bound volume sells for $16.50 at your local dealer or stamp department.

A "Penny Mulready" bearing a Penny Black stamp mailed on the first day of adhesive postage stamp issuance — May 6, 1840 — was purchased this month for $4,630 at a Stanley Gibbons auction in London. The buyer was a New York philatelist who had been searching for this rarity many years and is placing his stamp item on display at Barclays Bank in New York.

The Penny Mulready, named after Irish artist William Mulready who designed the special envelope, was intended as a method of prepaid postage under Rowland Hill's Uniform Penny Post scheme. They were introduced with the world's first postage stamps on May 6, 1840, but the public did not take to the designed envelope and they were withdrawn in 1841, thus making the Mulreadys with the Penny Black and the Two Pence Blue a rarity in stampdom.

Well, although the Christmas Seal is not a postage stamp, it is used so often on letters and packages that thousands of hobbyists keep a separate section for such stamps and Scott's U.S. Stamp Catalog, Specialized, devotes several pages with illustrations to the seals.

Einar Holboell, an employe of the Danish Post Office, is credited with having created the Christmas Seal. It was his idea that money could be raised for charitable purposes by the sale of such stamps — and the post offices of Denmark, Iceland and Sweden began to sell them during the Christmas season of 1904.
